Japan Ready To Apologize If Seized Tug Is American

Consul Incensed By Insult to Flag

Two Ships Flying Emblem of Italy Also Taken by Nipponese.

U. S.-Japanese Situation.

Japan was reported ready to return a tug confiscated at Shanghai and to apologize to the United States if the vessel is found to be legitimately American-owned.

The State Department announced Consul General Gauss had protested seizure of the tug. Page 3.

Apology Reported Near.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai (Wednesday) Dec. 1.—Japanese officials were reported today to be prepared to return the seized American tug Feiting and apologize for their confiscation of it if the vessel is found to be a legitimately-owned American ship.

A vigorous protest was understood to have been made by United States Consul General Clarence Gauss over the seizure.

It was understood the Japanese based their actioh in seizing the ship on a suspicion that it really was Chinese-owned and was transferred to American interests to prevent it from being taken as a war prize.

Ship Seized at Wharf.

The ship—a big steam tug—was seized late yesterday at the Kinlee-yuan wharf in the Whangpoo River off the French Concession.

Witnesses said an American flag flying on it was torn down and thrown into the river, and that a wooden plaque, showing its American ownership, was torn from the bridge-house.

The Japanese simultaneously seized two tugs flying the Italian flag. The vessels were towed down the river past the United States cruiser Augusta and the Italian cruiser Monte Cuccolo, which were anchored off the International Settlement.

The Italian consulate general also was reported to have protested.

Aroused by Flag Insult.

Gauss was said to have been particularly incensed at the desecration of the United States flag and to have told the Japanese that in the future they must respect the emblem. It was understood he said the flag could be touched only with the American consul general's specific permission.

Gauss also declared Washington would resist vigorously any seizure of American-owned property, and refused to admit the right of the Japanese to take possession of property in dispute until their legal right to do so had been clearly established.

It was the first instance in the war where Japanese actually had hauled down the American flag, although their aviators several times have bombed areas over which the flag was flying.

The Feiting was said to be the property of the William Hunt interests, which are among the largest American investments in China. Hunt was said to have purchased control of the line before hostilities were begun, and for this reason the consulate general was inclined to regard the Feiting as legitimately American-owned.

At the Japanese consulate general, it was said that if an American-owned ship really had been seized by the Japanese navy, it was the work of "irresponsible persons."

Alabama Gets Rose Bowl Bid; Santa Clara Will Meet L. S. U.

Berkeley, Calif., Nov. 30 (U.P.).—Kenneth Priestley, graduate manager of athletics at University of California, tonight announced that the University of Alabama had eccepted an invitation to meet California in the Rose Bowl football classic at Pasadena, Calif., New Year's Day.

(In New Orleans, once-beaten L. S. U. and undefeated, untied Santa Clara were selected to play in the Sugar Bowl.)

Priestley's announcement followed a telephone conversation with H. G. Crisp, director of athletics at Albaama, and ended the great football mystery of 1937 centering around California's choice of an opponent for the holiday classic.

It will be Alabama's fifth trip to the bowl.

Coached by Frank Thomas, the Alabamans went through a season of no defeats and no ties, and were considered the class of this year's crop of Southern teams.

Alabama defeated Howard, 41-0;

Drive for Chest Will Last Until Goal Is Reached

Officials Again Refuse to Quit, Will Boost Own Contributions.

The Community Chest drive will continue until the goal of $2,059,000 is reached, the Tenth Anniversary Campaign Committee announced yesterday, refusing for the second time to accept defeat in the fight to raise the money to support activities of 69 organizations during the coming year.

When workers gathered at what was to have been the final report meeting yesterday in the Willard Hotel, they discovered they were more than $227,000 short of their goal. Total funds raised thus far stood at $1,832,281.35.

Continuation of the campaign was announced at the luncheon by Newbold Noyes, associate editor of the Star, former Chest president and campaign director and now a member of the Tenth Anniversary Committee.

In the renewed drive, members of the committee will increase their own subscriptions 10 per cent and, if possible, will increase the contributions of their corporations or firms by the same amount, Noyes asserted.

Ely Culbertsons Part; She Seeks Reno Divorce

Most Famous Bridge Pair to Remain Partners in Bridge Business.

Mr. and Mrs. Ely Culbertson, the world's most famous bridge team, have decided to dissolve their 14-year-old marriage, they announced last night through attorneys in New York.

Mrs. Culbertson is en route to California by boat, and will seek a divorce in Reno, Culbertson said through his lawyer.

"I've lost a grand slam doubled," the noted bridge expert commented. He arrived in Manhattan from Washington yesterday.

The divorce, however, will not interfere with their bridge partnership or their business association of Culbertsons, Inc., from which each receives $100,000 or more annually, Culbertson, who will sail today aboard the liner Queen Mary for London, revealed.

Only Monday night in an interview here at the opening of the National Bridge Tournament at the Shoreham Hotel, Culbertson told The Post that if one fought with his wife over the bridge table, he would have a happy married life.

On checking the report that Mrs. Culbertson was too ill to come to Washington for the tournament, The Post found that she was en route to California by boat and then planned to go to Reno.

"The only tragic thing about our married life is that we don't quarrel over bridge," said the thin-haired expert.

The Culbertsons were married June 12, 1923, in New York City. They have two children, Joyce, 10, and Bruce, 9. The youngsters are

Josephine Baker Weds Parisian As Shotguns Roar, Geese Honk

By the United Press.

Paris, Nov. 30.—While the fire brigade band played a wedding march and a shotgun squad fired a salute, dusky Josephine Baker, the red-hot Harlem girl who rose to be queen of Parisian night life, today got married and became a French citizen at the same time.

The slender 31-year-old American dancer married Jean Lion, a wealthy white French merchant, aviator and sportsman, at a little village about 30 miles from Paris—Crevecoeur, which roughly translated means "heartbreak."

"I am pleased," the mayor declared, "heretofore the prominence of our village has been confined to a fifteenth century chateau and our famous black chicken hatcheries."

The slim, vivacious colored dancer who rose from a $25-a-week shuffle dancer in a St. Louis music hall to the fame of the "Folies Bergere" formerly was the wife of a mysterious Italian "Count Pepino de Albertini."

U. S. Reduces Price of Soft Coal in Home

Higher Rate Placed on Industrial Fuel by Commission.

More Stable Pay, Hours, Revitalization of Mines Its Aim.

Higher rates on industrial and railroad fuel and lower average prices for domestic grades of soft coal were announced by the National Bituminous Coal Commission last night in a schedule of minimum bituminous prices in the fields east of the Mississippi River and in Iowa.

About 80 per cent of the Nation's production area is included in the schedule.

The schedule will become effective December 16 in the three areas—1, 2 and 3—covered by the order.

The prices are designed to revitalize the industry, eliminate "cut-throat" competition and stabilize wages and hours of miners.

Must Abide by Prices.

Under the Guffey-Vinson coal-control act, producers who agree to the commission's code must abide by the prices fixed. As an inducement to supporting it, operators who agree to its stipulations pay a much smaller tonnage tax than those who refuse to observe its provisions.

For steam grades of coal, such as mine run, nut and slack, the commission used a level from 5 to 20 cents per ton higher than was proposed by the coal industry through producer boards.

Prices for double screened coal, commonly used in home furnaces, were lowered from 5 to 15 cents per ton below those proposed by the industry. The prices on this product will apply also to industrial users except artificial gas manufacturers and by-product plants.

Basis of New Prices.

All prices were established, the commission said, on a basis which will permit adjustment of existing freight differentials limited to an amount not more than 35 cents a ton, since it was believed that a producing district so situated that it could not reach a market without reducing its f. o. b. mine price above the limit was reaching too far for sales.

Affected areas, the commission said, include West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, North Carolina, Maryland, Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Alabama and Georgia. All prices established are f. o. b. at the mine.

The commission announced it immediately would seek to complete minimum price scales for the remaining districts west of the Mississippi River. It was expected that these would be ready in a "short time."

In its announcement the commission said:

"Pending possible revisions, in order that damage shall not accrue to anyone, the commission provided that contracts and orders may not

A.F.L. and C.I.O. Chiefs to Join Negotiations on 5 Union Issues.

Labor Developments.

Peace conferees of the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization defined five points which are at issue between them, and decided to discuss them one by one.

C. I. O. Chairman Lewis and A. F. L. President Green were expected to meet when negotiations resume tomorrow.

The C. I. O. prepared to extend its Ford Motor Co. strike in St. Louis to Long Beach, Calif., and Kansas City plants. Page 6.

Leaders Drawn In.

By the Associated Press.

John L. Lewis and William Green expect to step personally into labor peace negotiations when they are resumed tomorrow. Such a meeting would be the first between the two leaders since last spring.

These arch enemies in the struggle between the American Federation of Labor and Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization expect to head sub-committees which will continue the work of the joint peace conference that recessed yesterday.

Green, A. F. of L. president, is to work with George M. Harrison, president of the Railway Clerks Union and chairman of the A. F. of L. peace committee for nearly two years.

Asked to Take Post.

Lewis, C. I. O. chairman, is to serve with Philip Murray, vice president of the United Mine Workers and chairman of the C. I. O. peace committee appointed six weeks ago.

This four-man joint committee will take over the work, temporarily at least, of the committee of 13 that has met so far. The A. F. of L. sent three representatives to the conference. The C. I. O. sent 10.

Informed persons said the C. I. O. suggested Green and Lewis step into the conference.

The conference outlined the principal issues between the Federation and the C. I. O. under five headings yesterday and decided to discuss them one by one.

The C. I. O. contention (1) that all the workers in each large industry should belong to one big union without regard to A. F. L. craft lines topped the list made public by George M. Harrison, chairman of the A. F. L. peace committee.

This industrial union issue was responsible for the split in the A. F. L.

Other Points Listed.

Other issues on the list were:

(2) The C. I. O.'s insistence that it remain a semi-independent agency under the A. F. L. after peace is made. The A. F. L. demands that the C. I. O. be dissolved.

(3) The C. I. O.'s request that the powers of the A. F. L. executive council be curbed by amendment of the A. F. L. constitution if peace is effected.

(4) Machinery to make an agreement effective. Neither side has made public its views on this question.

(5) How many votes the C. I. O. unions would have in a joint convention that would be called to ratify an agreement the peace conference made.

Philip Murray, chairman of the C. I. O. peace delegation, emphasized that accord on those points would be only "a tentative agreement conditioned upon our ability to work out countless other disputes."

Baltimore, Nov. 30 (A).—Approximately 50,000 Irish sweepstakes tickets ran head-on into trouble in Baltimore's postoffice today.

The conference recessed after a morning session to meet again at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

Plight of Railroads Branded Major Obstacle to Recovery

Reduction in Expenses Sole Alternative to Rate increase, Veteran Officials Tell Interstate Commerce Commission.

By Sidney Olson.

Three veteran railroad officials told the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday that the plight of the rail industry was one of the biggest single obstacles to national recovery.

Opening a parade of rail presidents to the witness chair in the carriers' plea for increased freight and passenger rates, Ralph Budd, president, Chicago, Burlington & Quincy; Fred W. Sargent, president, Chicago & North Western; Hale Holden, chairman, Southern Pacific, and Fairman H. Dick, finance consultant, Association of American Railroads, made these major points:

The only alternative to increased rates will be to slash expenses, meaning heavy cuts in employment and a huge shrinkage in transportation operations.

Would Improve Holdings.

The railroads, granted the increase, could spend $900,000,000 a year for the next several years for improved plants and equipment.

New money is sorely needed in the industry, but the first essential of such investments is net earnings sufficiently large to sustain railroad credit.

Declining revenues, increased fuel and material costs, rising wages and heavier taxes have been responsible for the railroads' present distress, and not management inefficiency.

The margin between income and expenses has been narrowed so far that impaired credit generally, trusteeship in some cases and receivership in others has resulted inevitably.

Income Shows Drop.

Emphasizing the distressed condition of the industry since the beginning of the present business slump, the monthly report of the Association's Bureau of Railway Economics, released yesterday, showed:

Net railway operating income for

Senate Battle On Postmaster Jobs Predicted

Patronage Versus Merit System Issue as Compromise Is Sought.

A spirited fight on the Senate floor over whether postmaster appointments should be restored to a patronage basis or put under Civil Service by statute was forecast yesterday as the Senate Postoffices and Post Roads Committee reported the McKellar bill by a vote of 9 to 4.

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, former First Assistant Postmaster General, made a vain attempt to substitute his Civil Service measure, and subsequently announced he would file a minority report.

When the McKellar bill, which O'Mahoney charged would restore the patronage system that operated prior to the issuance of an executive order by President Roosevelt, is called up, the Wyoming Senator will move to substitute his own bill or amend McKellar's.

O'Mahoney said it would be futile to try to get action on the Civil Service bills before the Senate Civil Service Committee, as they have been bottled up since last session. Included in this lot is Proposal to Cut Funds for Roads Irritates Both Houses.

Only 4 Measures Left on Program

Program Restricted.

Steering committees in both houses of Congress moved to restrict the special session program and to end the stalemate between supporters of farm and wages-hours bills.

President Roosevelt sent to Congress a message proposing reduction in Federal-aid highway expenditures, and at once provoked spirited opposition.—Page 14.

Rebellion Spreads.

By Robert C. Albright.

Irritated at White House proposals for highway fund savings, stalemated on wages and hours legislation, Congress yesterday moved through another day of dragging farm bill debate with taut-tempered warnings of "trouble" ahead.

Nearing the special session's halfway mark with a negative score to date, leadership steering committees on both sides of the Capitol considered a sharply restricted agenda with a new item added—Federal aid to home builders.

Complicating their drive for more speed was the spreading rebellion on road fund cuts and threats of a farm bill blockade by House "big city" laborites unless rural members come to aid of the wages bill discharge petition before Saturday's deadline for action this session.

Two Items Abandoned.

An "optimistic" program was tentatively framed by the Senate steering committee for action by December 22. It listed the farm bill now before the Senate, the anti-lynching bill, Government reorganization and the President's housing program. Unmentioned were such other items on the White House list as anti-trust legislation and regional planning.

The House Democratic steering committee heard leaders report that no program can be framed for the session until a discharge petition determines fate of the wages bill late this week. Chairman Jed Johnson of the House steering group said his chamber will have done a "big job" if it passes the farm bill, the wages bill and the President's housing measure.

Strong Administration voices in both Houses rose in protest yesterday on receipt of the President's message asking that Congress repeal an authorization of $214,000,000 in highway grants to States as a budget-balancing aid. He recommended that Congress in future years limit highway authorization to $125,600,000 a year.

Heyden, Ashurst Rebel.

Opposition developed at once on the Senate floor. Senator Carl Hayden (Democrat), Arizona, said Congress would be violating a "contractual obligation" if it abandoned the authorization. Senator Henry F. Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona, declared the executive departments

Willkie Offers Utility Program To Roosevelt

'Write-Up' Elimination, 'Prudent Investment' Theory Upheld.

The memorandum proposed "write-up" elimination and recommendation to the utilities of the "prudent investment" theory of valuation.

This became clear last night with disclosure by the Associated Press of the text of the Willkie memorandum, which it reported came from an authoritative source.

"In my judgment, the greatest immediate requirement of the utility industry is a large inflow of common capital indispensable for much-needed additional construction. Without arguing the causes of the present hesitancy of capital to invest in utility common stocks, I have certain suggestions which I believe will immediately stimulate such investment and make possible a large construction program with a considerable increase in employment. . . .

"May I suggest consideration of the following program:

"(a). Retention of all its regulatory provisions over financing and accounting practices, issuance of securities, relationship between operating companies and holding companies, etc.

"(B) Modification of Section II, the so-called "death sentence," so as to eliminate all intermediate holding companies within three years, but otherwise to confirm existing holding companies in their present ownership of property, requiring that any future acquisition of property or securities shall be subject to the approval of the Securities and Exchange Commission or the Federal Power Commission.

"2. Determination of the following policies for the Tennessee Valley Authority and other similar Federal projects:

"That the power therefrom shall be sold to presently operating utility systems, whether public or private, but at a price arrived at under the cost accounting methods prescribed for private utilities by the Federal Power Commission, and that, in view of the loss to the consumer in the building of duplicate transmission lines, such duplication should be avoided by purchase if possible.

"That the rates at which power is distributed by these public or private agencies shall be fixed under the regulation of the Federal Power Commission.

"That if any municipality not presently operating a utility system desires to establish its own system and purchase power from the Tennessee Valley Authority or other Federal agency, such municipality shall be required to purchase, at a price to be determined by a fair tribunal, the existing distribution system of the private utility in such city and a fair allocable amount of its generation and transmission system.

"That such purchase be made without any gift or grant from the Federal Government to avoid stimulating the disintergration of existing utility systems as caused by the present Federal policy of making outright gifts to municipalities to duplicate existing distribution lines."

British Open Pact Talks in January

A delegation from the British Board of Trade is expected here early in January prepared to begin discussions preparatory to negotiation of a trade agreement between the United States and the United Kingdom, it was said last night in official quarters.

It was said that Maj. Henry F. Heywood, commercial secretary of the British Embassy staff, would be in charge of the discussions. Experts on the visiting committee have not been named as yet, it was understood.

At the State Department, it was emphasized the department is "marking time" while receiving suggestions as to what commodities should be discussed, December 15 having been fixed as a tentative deadline for receipt of such suggestions. Formal notice will be given then of "intention to negotiate" and hearings will follow. The department said it expected to be prepared to begin negotiation discussions early in the new year.

Working for Washington

Unity in Diversity Is Motto Of Clubs' Federation Leader

MRS. LLOYD W. BIDDLE.

Mrs. Biddle Leads 10,000 D. C. Women in Study of Their Problems; Neglects Her Hobby, Art, to Work for 33 Groups.

By Christine Sadler.

"What do the women think about this?" is a question that each year grows more important. (Or so the women love to think!)

The person with most authority to answer such a query in Washington at this time is Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, president of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs.

By virtue of her position Mrs. Biddle is chief spokeswoman for almost 10,000 club members. Her board of directors is composed of 280 women from 33 different organizations. (When as many women as that agree on something it becomes an agreement no city father nor business group can ignore.)

Studying Problems.

"Unity in Diversity" is the motto of the federation and one look at its yearbook is enough to convince that the members have realized at least the latter part of that aspiration. If it exists, they have a committee for it.

From housekeeping to "the principle of gradually untaxing industry and the raising of public revenues from publicly created wealth," they are studying the Nation's problems.

Mrs. Biddle is a strong advocate of departmental club work and declares there should be a place in women's clubs for every woman who is interested.

"Our activities touch every phase of life in the District," she says.

Teaches Art at Home.

Juvenile Court legislation that will make it possible to keep the young offender entirely separated from the hardened criminal long has been an interest of the federation. Protective and preventive work among boys and girls is a major concern with Mrs. Biddle, who thinks the crime records prove that "our youth are not getting what they should."

She has for many years interested herself in the work of the Florence Crittenton Home, teaching art free to its girls for seven years.

Mrs. Biddle is not a militant worker for "equal rights for women." She believes that an equal-rights amendment would wipe the slates clean of protective legislation that still is badly needed. "The girl in industry is not yet vocal. We miss our whole chance if we do not look out after her."

One of her chief worries is the "chance the movies are missing." She considers the movies the greatest single educational factor in the country today and thinks there is a crying need for them to be brought up in quality.

"There already is much available that is fine, but it is not available to the masses. I am thinking of programs such as those provided by the National Geographic Society. Such as this should not be kept just for the classes," she declares.

Now Neglects Her Hobby.

A Marylander by birth, Mrs. Biddle has lived on Baltimore avenue in Takoma Park for 20 years, during much of which time she has devoted her entire time to club work and kindred activities. Since she has been the federation president, she has had to discontinue her "one main and consuming hobby"—art.

"My brushes have dried up and my studio is a mess. My garden needs me, too, but there is so much to be done," she says. She has eight more months to go as president of the club women and then she may try her hand at Maryland politics. Her grandfather and great-grandfather were in the Legislature at Annapolis, and she thinks there might be a chance for her to follow in their footsteps. Her husband was connected with the Interstate Commerce Commission for a number of years before his death about a year ago. They had no children.

On Friday—Paul E. Jamieson, president of the Burroughs Citizens Association, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Hearings Open To Speed Huge Housing Plan

McDonald, FHA Chief, Explains President's Proposal to Committee.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt's proposals for reducing cost of home building in hope of stirring a construction boom were sped in both Houses of Congress yesterday.

Hearings were begun by the House Banking Committee and Senate leaders put the bills embodying the proposal on their list for enactment at the special session.

The House committee, beginning hearings on the legislation, heard Stewart McDonald, Federal housing administrator, explain the proposal submitted Monday by President Roosevelt for reducing interest, carrying charges and, in the case of small homes, the down payment on new homes.

The President proposed a 5 per cent net figure for interest and service charges, but Representative Fish (Republican), New York, asked why this could not be cut to 3½ per cent.

McDonald replied that such a rate would be "wonderful," but added that the only way it could be achieved would be through "constant pressure on the national mortgage associations," lending institutions which the bill seeks to foster.

"We would be happy to see the rate down to the lowest point," McDonald replied. "But we don't lend money. We merely insure loans. If we made the rate too low, the banks will say 'very interesting' and that's all.

Luce Questions Debt Idea.

"If we leave it at 5 per cent," Fish asserted, "I'm predicting right now the program will fail."

Representative Crawford (Republican), Michigan, turning to the proposal that down payments on small homes be cut from 20 to 10 per cent of the purchase price, asked if such provision would not draw borrowers away from building and loan associations.

McDonald replied that even with the present 20 per cent down payment, many building and loan associations use the housing administration and that about 20 per cent of all the mortgages which the Administration insures come from such organizations.

Representative Fish said he could not understand "why we can't get that interest rate lower," adding:

"Why can't the rate be reduced to 3½ per cent, when banks and the Government can get money for 3 per cent or less?

From Representative Luce (Republican), Massachusetts, came an inquiry whether McDonald thought it "socially desirable for a man to be enticed to incur debts if he has no supporting funds."

The Administrator said "no," and added:

"But any man should be encouraged to buy a home, which is separate and apart from automobiles and fur coats."

LaGuardia Gets 2d Bid.

In the last two or three years, he told the committee, the American people bought 500,000 homes and 9,000,000 automobiles, although the payments are at a comparable monthly level.

On another housing front, Nathan Straus, administrator of the United States Housing Authority, sent Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York another invitation to a conference of municipal housing authorities on financing slum-clearance and low-cost housing, to be held here Monday.

The invitation, Straus disclosed at a press conference, was in reply to a demand from LaGuardia for action on a low-cost housing program for New York City by December 15.

"I want to build houses immediately," LaGuardia telegraphed Straus, "and not chicken coops for Thanksgiving of 1938."

Sprague Sees Hope.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 30 (AP).—O. M. W. Sprague, professor at the Harvard Business School, tonight asserted President Roosevelt's housing recommendations should give the average business man confidence.

"Anything which produces something for which there is a demand," declared the formed adviser to the United States Treasury and to the Bank of England in an interview, "gives confidence." And nothing can stimulate general greater activity than building."

"The main thing, it seems to me, is that the President is aware we must reduce unit costs of construction, a view he has only recently taken. At least he has never, in the past expressed himself as forcibly on this matter . . ."

On Capitol Hill

Roosevelt Wants Less Spent on Roads, Michigan Democrat Urges More—G. O. P. Puzzled.

MEMBERS OF CONGRESS from "better roads" States yesterday were in a fine state of confusion over what to do about highway authorizations.

Both Houses received a message from the President urging them not only to cut down future road authorizations, but to abandon some already made.

Particularly perplexed was Representative Carl E. Mapes, of Michigan. Mapes is a Republican, yet he received a wire from a Democrat, Murray D. Van Wagoner, Michigan State highway commissioner, asking larger road appropriations.

"The manufacture of automobiles will not continue to expand unless our road system continues to expand," telegraphed Van Wagoner, who said "two of our three major industries of this State are entirely dependent upon roads and particularly upon a continuation of the development of our primary road system."

Failure to increase road appropriations, the Michigan State official said, would "create a heavier burden of welfare relief."

Mapes sat down and pondered a while and decided that somewhere the signals were crossed. Then he sent the following return wire to Van Wagoner:

"I wish you and the President would get together. I hate to see such dissension in Democratic Party ranks as this telegram indicates. The President in his message to Congress today requests a decrease in appropriations for roads. Your telegram asks for an increased.

CARL E. MAPES."

SENATOR THOMAS (Democrat), of Utah, was selected chairman of the Senate Labor Committee. He succeeds Hugo L. Black, Alabama Senator who was elevated to the Supreme Court.

Senator Green (Democrat), of Rhode Island, was added to the Foreign Relations Committee. Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, was named to the Finance Committee.

Two new Democratic Senators were given first committee assignments. Mrs. Dixie Bibb Graves, of Alabama, was placed on Claims, Labor and Mines and Mining committees. John E. Miller, of Arkansas, was given posts on the Military Affairs, Territories and Insular Affairs, Rules and Printing committees.

Dickstein (Democrat), New York, offered a bill to deny citizenship to persons who believe in or advocate government by dictatorship.

Split Opinions Balk Reforms, Lawes Warns

Tells Crime Institute 'We Must Know Our Ultimate Goal.'

The United States never has been able to devise a sound and logical penal philosophy because of the divergence of opinion regarding the functions of prisons, declared Lewis E. Lawes, warden of Sing Sing Prison at Ossining, N. Y., speaking last night at Wardman Park Theater, under the auspices of the Institute of Criminal Science.

"We are at odds as to the functions of our prisons," he declared. "Are they merely to seek retribution or reform? Unless we know what our ultimate goal is, it is impossible to head for it. Time and time again our Legislatures pass enactments professedly designed to reclaim the law breaker, when clearly the underlying motive is to seek more revenge.

"There always will be some who cannot adjust themselves to the social sphere. We therefore need a competent police force capable of apprehending the criminal at the first sign of delinquency.

The panel discussion was led by Col. Claude Jones, director of the National Training School for Boys; Dr. Gustav Peck, Board of Prison Industries, and Ray L. Huff, general superintendent of Penal Institutions of the District.

Capt. Patrick B. Kelly, director of the Institute of Criminal Science, was host at a luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower for Warden Lawes. The guests, besides the panel discussion leaders, included Judge Edward M. Curran, Dr. James E. Nolan, director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association; Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Post; Ernest W. Griffith, dean of American University Graduate School; the Rev. Robert J. White, dean of Catholic University Law School; Dr. W. E. Ruediger, provost of George Washington University; Dr. Harry C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland; Dr. Winifred Overholzer, director of St. Elizabeths Hospital, and James V. Bennett, director of the Bureau of Prisons of the Department of Justice.

Gauss Protests Japan's Insult To U. S. Flag

Consul General Reports Tug Seizure; Open Door Policy Menaced.

By the United Press.

Clarence Gauss, American consul general in Shanghai, in dispatches to the State Department last night officially confirmed reports that a Japanese naval detachment had seized a launch flying the American Flag, had lowered the flag and towed the craft away.

Gauss said he filed an immediate protest with the Japanese consul general.

The State Department said Gauss did not cable complete details and that it was telegraphing him for additional information.

Gauss did not name the boat involved. Press dispatches, however, said it was the American-owned tug Feiting and that Japanese sailors ripped down the American flag and threw it into the Whangpoo River.

The Gauss message said the launch was moored along the French concession bund, that the Japanese detachment boarded her, lowered the flag and then towed the craft away. It added that two Italian-owned lighters flying Italian flags were seized at the same time and that German launches were taken similarly some days ago.

The American launch, Gauss said, formerly was owned by the China Merchants Steam Navigation Co., and now belongs to the China Foreign Steamship Co., which is understood to be an American concern.

Earlier yesterday the United States Government moved to safeguard China's historic "open door" trade policy following receipt of press dispatches from Tientsin indicating Japan may be preparing to breach tariff treaties.

The State Department cabled the American consul at Tientsin for confirmation of the reports which said customs duties on a long list of Japanese products had been reduced materially, but failed to indicate whether other powers would receive equal treatment.

The Tientsin reports, still unconfirmed last night, posed the question whether Japan may have forced imposition of lower customs duties, thus violating the Nine-Power Treaty, or whether Chinese officials made the reductions voluntarily, thus leaving the way clear for other nations to benefit.

Department officials were gravely concerned, inasmuch as the reports followed closely Japan's announced intention to assume control of maritime customs at Shanghai, a move which they fear will result in discrimination in favor of Japanese products to the extinction of American trade.

Belgium to Retain 'No Alliance' Plan

Brussels, Nov. 30 (AP).—Premier Paul Emile Janson, outlining a program of internal reforms, declared today his new government would continue Belgium's policy of steering clear of foreign alliances.

Summarizing the newly formed cabinet's program before the Chamber of Deputies, the premier said a "strong military effort" would be maintained.

Janson, who succeeded to the premiership designed by Paul Van Zeeland, presented proposals for social reforms, including unemployment and sick insurance, and a 40-hour week in dangerous occupations.

Grain Co-operative Faces Dissolution

Fostoria, Ohio, Nov. 30 (AP).—Dissolution of the Farmer's National Grain Corporation, an eight-year-old national grain marketing co-operative owned and controlled by farmers, will be proposed to stockholders January 24, President W. C. Horne of Fostoria and General Manager W. C. Engel of Chicago said in a statement today.

Operations would be conducted instead through area corporations, they said.

Financial troubles of the company resulted from a loss of a million dollars in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1936, which wiped out its remaining capital and surplus.

Brazil State Invokes Law Against Two Jobs

Porto Alegre, Brazil, Nov. 30 (AP).—Gen. Manoel Daltro Filho, interventor in the State of Rio Grande do Sul, today invoked the new constitutional measure forbidding federal, state and municipal employes from holding more than one government job.

Affecting many thousands of public employes, the general's order permits state and municipal employes to collect pay for the job they prefer, or the highest-paid job if they do not express a preference.

International Colonies 'Pool' Proposed to Satisfy Germany

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

London, Nov. 30.—The premiers and foreign ministers of Great Britain and France, groping for a solution to Europe's troubles, today agreed to satisfy "in principle" Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's demand for the restoration of colonies stripped from Germany after the World War.

The statesmen, bulwarking their democratic entente in a historic two-day conference, decided to propose an international "pooling" of colonies for German exploitation.

But they left the next move up to Hitler and demanded that he abandon his militaristic defiance and sit down and talk things over peaceably.

The projected colonies "pool" will be the reward, according to the authoritatively outlined plan, if the Reichsfuehrer gives rigid assurances that he is ready to contribute to a plan of durable peace.

The tossing of the Reich's former colonies into one basket to satisfy Hitler's claims would require consent from several other powers and dominions holding territorial mandates.

The British and French governments immediately notified Belgium, which holds a league mandate over part of the former German territories in East Africa, of their decision.

Japan, however, was not notified, although she acquired German islands in the Pacific.

It was stated that no further formal approach would be made to Germany until after diplomatic exchanges between Paris and London on a definite plan.

Because of Japan's warfare in China, it was indicated that the territorial "pool" might be organized among Britain, France and Belgium.

Premier Camille Chautemps and Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos of France returned to Paris late today.

In their two days of discussion the statesmen decided Hitler must be given satisfaction for the injustices of the Versailles Treaty that stripped Germany of territories six times larger than the fatherland.

The problem, it was explained, is linked closely with the involved question of general European security, and progress depends entirely on what guarantees are forthcoming from Hitler. That progress, it was admitted, will be neither rapid nor sure.

Chautemps, in a communique followed by a British announcement in almost identical wording, said the British and French leaders decided the colonial question was not an isolated one, but one that must be considered with other countries.

The question requires "much more extensive study," the British statement declared.

"The French conferees recognized that Viscount Halifax's recent visit to Germany helped remove the cause of international misunderstanding and was well calculated to improve the atmosphere," the statement added.

Loyalists Attack As Air Raid Reply

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Nov. 30 (AP).—Spanish government artillery and infantry took the offensive today against insurgent lines in several sectors to counteract repeated enemy air raids.

Government guns pounded the Zuera sector, on the Aragon front. Particularly active were three batteries installed at Alcubierre, northeast of Zaragoza.

Infantry made a number of sallies in the Toledo sector, southwest of Madrid. Insurgent advices said the attacks were halted.

Paralysis Hits 1,000th.

Melbourne, Australia, Nov. 30 (AP). The 1,000th case of infantile paralysis was registered today in the State of Victoria, suffering an epidemic since July. Deaths have reached 57.

Parisians, Fearing Arrest as Plotters, Dump War Relics

Paris, Nov. 30 (AP).—Arms seizures in the government drive against a secret revolutionary organization accused of plotting to set up a dictatorship in France led to new consequences today.

Many Parisians who kept arms as war souvenirs and others with arms supplies dropped them in streets and parks, fearing they might be connected with the plot if the arms were found in their homes.

Uncle Sam Says "Buy Now, Mail Early"

Sea Union Head Defends Algic Crew on Radio

Curran Attacks Ship Owners, Saying They Bilked U. S. People.

Attacking private ship owners in general, Joseph Curran, acting head of the National Maritime Union, defended the crew of the Algic in a radio address over WOL last night.

"For years the most important shipping interests in America have been on a sit-down strike against the American people," said Curran.

"Today the American merchant marine is described in the report of the Maritime Commission as a 'sick industry.' Our merchant marine, built up at the expense of the American public, at a cost of approximately $6,000,000,000 during the war, now ranks sixth when it rightfully should be first.

Curran took to task the officers aboard the Algic and condemned "conditions the crew objected to."

"There were unsanitary conditions in the sleeping quarters and wash rooms," he said. "And there was no provision made for the payment of overtime to those entitled to it.

"Now, as to the officers aboard the ship, they were living examples of the old-time 'bucko mate,' reminiscent of the swashbuckling days of American sailing vessels."

Fulton Lewis, jr., news commentator of WOL, replied to Curran. He said that the Algic's crew had recourse to consuls at ports where she docked if they were dissatisfied with conditions aboard their boat.

"A strike in a factory is one thing," said he, "but a strike aboard a boat imperils life and invites disaster at sea."

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 30.—Fourteen seamen, who "sat down" in sympathy with longshoremen on strike in a foreign port, were indicted by a Federal grand jury today for conspiring to revolt and "unlawfully and feloniously endeavoring to make a revolt."

Four other members of the crew of the government freighter Algic who participated in the sit-down strike at Montevideo, Urugay last September 10, and who subsequently fled the ship, were named as co-conspirators, but for lack of jurisdiction were not indicted.

If convicted, the men face possible fines of $1,000, or five-year jail terms, or both, said Bernard J. Flynn, District Attorney.

Sole Alternative to Rate Boost Is Expense Cut, Leaders Tell I. C. C.

Class I railroads in October was 32.4 per cent below October, 1936.

Operating costs were 3.6 per cent greater this October than in the same month last year, while gross revenues for the months were 4.7 per cent less than a year ago.

During yesterday's proceedings, John F. Finerty, Washington attorney, representing shippers' interests, interjected a request that the railroads consider notifying shippers as to the status of the rates to be announced on many commodities December 20, in line with the recent commission ruling granting increased rates to the roads.

Finerty, in asking for five minutes in which to outline the "confused position resulting from this situation," told Commissioner Clyde B. Aitchison, presiding:

"If it's worth considering, I promise not to open my mouth again at this hearing."

"That's well worth considering," said Aitchison dryly, as the hundreds of rail officials, shippers and lawyers roared.

Undaunted, Finerty continued with a description of the statistical chaos in which shippers found themselves, without knowledge of the rates to be set December 20, while faced with the necessity of applying for a suspension of the tariffs by December 10, with the present proposed further increase as another complication to their calculations.

Speed Is Urged.

For these reasons, he asked the railroads to consider expediting their announcements in order to give shippers a basis for presentation of their case.

The attitude of the shippers—one of generous co-operation with the proceedings, coupled with the commission's expressed desire to slice through red tape—is expected by observers to fulfill the railroads' hope for an early decision.

Fairman Dick, who took the stand first yesterday, told the commissioners "the real difficulty" in the railroads' situation was not in "an increasing burden of fixed charges, nor in overexpansion of plant or capitalization."

"In proportion to revenue, interest on debt and other fixed charges of railroads today are no higher than they were from 1900 to 1907, when railroads enjoyed their highest credit," he added. "Actually, fixed charges are 40 per cent less than they were in the depression years of the 1890's.

"Out of the dollar which the shipper pays for railroad service today, 40 per cent less goes to the holders of railroad bonds than went to the holders of railroad bonds 40 years ago.

". . . In 1894, railroad debt was 54.5 per cent of railroad investment. In 1906, when railroad prosperity and credit were highest, debt was 57.5 per cent of investment. Today it is 44.5 per cent, before allowing for depreciation, or 49.9 per cent after depreciation."

In developing his study of railroad investments, earnings and costs since 1890, Dick stressed the fact that through the railroads' continuously increased investment in better plants, the average revenue for hauling a ton of freight a mile is less than 5 per cent above that in 1890, although the average of commodity prices is 44 per cent above that of 1890. Average passenger revenue per mile is the lowest in history, he noted, while compensation of rail employes averages nearly four times that of 1895, and railroad taxes per unit of service rendered are nearly 2½ times the 1890 figures.

Budd, following, outlined the enormous capital expenditures the railroads could make in the next few years if assured of adequate revenues.

The roads, he said, could replace their 2,000,000 cars in the next 20 years through the purchase of 100,000 new cars a year, at an annual expenditure of $300,000,000; could "advantageously purchase" 2,000 new locomotives annually for the next several years at a yearly cost of another $300,000,000, and spend a similar sum on other physical improvements.

Saving of $125,000,000.

He estimated an annual saving of $125,000,000 in operating expenses if present freight equipment were replaced with new light-weight freight cars, emphasizing the fact that the new alloys made possible construction of freight cars that weigh much less and carry much more. The same process could be followed in locomotives and track, he asserted.

The Burlington's situation, in brief, he presented thusly:

"In 1937 the Burlington will handle about 560,000,000 more tonmiles of freight and about 120,000,000 passenger-miles of travel than it did in 1931. Yet for the substantially larger amount of service performed in 1937, compared with 1931, the Burlington will receive about $11,2000,000 less gross revenue this year than in 1931, due to reduced freight and passenger charges. Because of this and the increased cost of doing business this year, the Burlington will earn only about half as much net railway operating income in 1937 as 1931, and about one-sixth as much net income."

Anti-Trust Bill 'Policing' Trade Offered Senate

Plan Gives Government Life-and-Death Power Over Corporations.

An anti-monopoly bill, giving the Government licensing power over industry and rigidly defining conditions under which corporations may continue to function, was introduced jointly yesterday by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), Montana, and Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho.

The bill, virtually bestowing upon the Government the power of life and death over corporations through exercise of the licensing power, combined features of Borah's former anti-trust bill and O'Mahoney's "national incorporation" measure.

Last night O'Mahoney said he "hoped for" Administration support of the measure, because "I think it ties in perfectly with the President's plans to strengthen the anti-trust laws." Borah is known to have discussed anti-trust legislation with the President on the latter's Western tour, but has declined to discuss the results of the conference. The President placed anti-trust law revision on his special season agenda, but no Administration program has been presented.

Meanwhile, the Federal Trade Commission began an investigation into "monopolistic and other unwholesome competitive practices," ordered ten days ago by the President, and will open hearings today on alleged cement combinations.

C.I.O. to Order Ford Strike in 2 More Cities

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Nov. 30.—Leaders of the United Automobile Workers' strike against the Ford Motor Co. in St. Louis were informed today of the C. I. O's. plan to extend the strike to Ford plants in Long Beach, Calif., and Kansas City.

Delmond Garst, regional director of the union, said the strike calls would be made on complaints, similar to that of the St. Louis local, that the company discriminated against union members in rehiring workers after a seasonal layoff.

In Washington, Richard Frankensteen, U. A. W. A. vice president, said he had ordered Ford locals at Long Beach and Kansas City to "make all preparations" but to withhold definite strike action pending further instructions.

The recently reopened Kansas City plant employs 2,300 men, when working at capacity, and the Long Beach plant, 2,500.

The Ford Co. has 12 of its 16 assembly units in operation, with others scheduled to go into production within a few days. Total employment was reported at more than 100,000 on a five-day-week production schedule of 3,000 cars daily.

There was little change in the situation at the St. Louis plant, which has continued operating since the strike was called last Wednesday.

Milton N. Johnson, manager, said 597 employes manned the assembly lines, commenting:

"This is the biggest day so far this season, despite this so-called strike. We're not bothered."

William Kimberling, president of the U. A. W. A. Ford local, countered with the claim that only 387 men had gone to work. He charged the company had "imported" 50 workers from its Memphis (Tenn.) plant. Johnson denied any outsiders were hired.

Congress Leaders Drop Trust, Planning Bills as Revolt Rises

were "grasping for more and more power" and Congress should not yield its road-building authority to "discretionary" decisions by the Secretary of Agriculture. Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, said many States already have levied highway taxes in anticipation of the grants.

Across the Capitol, Chairman Wilburn Cartwright, of the House Roads Committee, said: "If President Roosevelt wants to balance the budget and will reduce everything in proportion to the roads fund decrease, that's one thing. But to take it out on the roads—that is something else again. I do not know what others may say, but I do not intend to take it laying down."

But the new housing program—first step by the President to combat the business recession—was given a bright green light by leaders anxious to do something to revive trade. Committees on both sides of the Capitol started work on housing bills, and leaders forecast special session action.

Glass Skeptical.

Skepticism was expressed by Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, who said he was opposed "to the Government going into business." Glass said the Government "has no more right to build private houses than I have to build public houses."

Meantime, the farm bill now before the House was threatened with obstruction by ardent wages and hours bill advocates, resentful because rural members from Southern States are not signing the wages bill discharge petition.

The petition, which must net a total of 218 names by Saturday to assure House wages action on December 13, picked up only 5 signatures yesterday, a total of only 193. Signers were Representatives Cochran, Missouri; Hart, New Jersey; Somers, New York; Jenckes, Indiana, and Mitchell, Illinois, all Democrats. Farm bloc members failed to follow the lead of Representative Marvin Jones, of Texas, in signing the petition.

"If there are not enough names on the petition tomorrow, there may be some trouble," said Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House Labor Committee. A reporter asked if she meant "opposition to the farm bill" and she said: "Yes."

"Personally," she added, "I'm not in favor of voting by blocs, according to sections, but I'm in the minority."

Representative Joseph A. Gavagan (Democrat), of New York, said "the boys from the cotton States are going to get it." Representative Arthur D. Healey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, another wages bill supporter, declared "city members" were not organized as yet in opposition to the farm bill, but may oppose it "as individuals."

"The way I look at it is this, if something is done for the farmers, something ought to be done for the workers—it isn't a one-way proposition. Members ought to consider these as companion bills," he said.

While farm debate lagged in the Senate, Majority Leader Barkley met with his steering committee in an effort to agree on a minimum special-session program of legislation. He announced the four-point "goal" following the conference and again predicted farm-bill action "within the week."

It was learned Finance Chairman Pat Harrison told the group he saw no prospect of special-session action on taxes, but if the House acted in the next few weeks, his own committee would proceed with alacrity. Night sessions to expedite general legislation were mentioned, but no decision was reached. The antilynching bill comes automatically before the Senate, once the farm bill is passed and a Southern filibuster against it still is threatened.

The House steering committee adopted no fixed program after leaders pointed out that the whole House legislative schedule hinges on whether the Rules Committee is discharged from the deadlocked wages bill. Speaker Bankhead told reporters the House has nothing scheduled between the time it passes the farm bill and December 11—the first day the wages bill could come up.

Bolleau Hits South.

As farm bill advocates battle opposition in both Houses, the national co-operative council of farmers' marketing and purchasing organizations issued a statement condemning proposed compulsory production control and "crop loans based on parity prices without regard to world price levels."

Senator Allen J. Ellender, of Louisiana, former lieutenant of the late Huey Long, held the Senate floor through the day in defense of the farm bill. He said the Senate committee had given the farmers what they wanted, "a control program with teeth in it." Ellender favored processing taxes on rice, wheat and cotton, to finance benefit payments to farmers.

The House heard Representative Gerald J. Boileau (Progressive), of Wisconsin, oppose farm bill features he said would "subsidize" new Southern competition in the dairy business. He said Southern farmers would receive benefits for retiring cotton acres, which could be used for pasturing new dairy herds.

Representative Clare E. Hoffman (Republican), Michigan, charged the farm bill world become "a political tool" to be "used like relief funds were used—to further the interests of the party in power."

$5,000 Bond Set For Girl Athlete In Child's Killing

Philadelphia, Nov. 30.—Mary K. O'Connor, 19-year-old Immaculata College student charged with homicide in the Labor Day death of Nancy Glenn, 5, was allowed $5,000 bond today by Judge L. Stauffer Oliver.

The athletic young woman had dictated a "confession" that she killed Nancy in a fit of anger, but refused to sign it.

William A. Gray, Miss O'Connor's attorney, said it probably would be some time before the bond could be raised, freeing her from Moya Mensing Prison.

U. S. to Hang Killer In Michigan, State Lacking Death Law

Bay City, Mich., Nov. 30 (AP).—Anthony Chebatoris, Detroit hoodlum convicted of murder in a bank-robbery attempt, was sentenced by Federal Judge Arthur J. Tuttle today to be hanged at the Federal Detention Farm at Milan, Mich., next July 8.

Chebatoris would be the second white man executed in Michigan history.

Chebatoris was convicted of slaying Henry J. Porter, a Bay City truck driver, after Chebatoris and Jack Gracey, also of Detroit, failed in an attempt to rob the Chemical State Bank at Midland, Mich., September 29. Gracey was shot and killed by Dr. Frank Hardy, a sharpshooting dentist.

Michigan State law does not provide capital punishment. Chebatoris was brought to trial in Federal court under the national bank robbery act of 1934.

The only other person ever executed in Michigan was an innkeeper hanged in Detroit in 1830 for slaying his wife.

Milkman Discovers Couple Slain in Car

Pittsburgh, Nov. 30 (AP).—A milkman found a man and woman shot to death today in an automobile in suburban Bellevue.

The coroner's office, through cards found in the pocketbooks of the victims, identified them as W. H. Forsythe and Rosalia Karr.

Georgia Senate Asks Action on Farm Bills

Atlanta, Nov. 30 (AP).—The Georgia Senate adopted today a resolution urging some Georgians in Congress "to cease their bickerings about the Supreme Court and the C. I. O." and help enact laws "advocated by our President" to aid farmers. The vote was 21 to 17.

The resolution said Georgia farmers enjoyed some prosperity until the Supreme Court invalidated agricultural acts.

PERSISTENT BACKACHE
Look To Your Kidneys
They May Need Attention
It's an old saying that "thousands have kidney weakness and don't know it."
Backache may or may not come from bad functioning kidneys, but it often does.
Much of the waste, excess acids and poisons are drawn from the blood and expelled thru the kidneys and bladder—if the kidneys become inactive and do not work naturally they need flushing just as do the bowels.
So if your back aches—if your bladder is irritable—if passage is difficult or scanty and ofttimes smarts and burns—if you have to break your refreshing sleep by getting up often at night—if you are continually nervous or irritable, it may be that your kidneys need attention.
One good and effective Kidney diuretic and stimulant that brings gratifying results is GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules—it's safe—it's harmless—and has been helping people with weak kidneys for scores of years.
But be sure it's GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules—right from Haarlem in Holland—ask for and get GOLD MEDAL—the original—the genuine—Be smart enough not to accept a counterfeit.

Creech Denies He Threatened U. S. Witness

Testifies From Stand Notes Garbled at Senate Inquiry.

In a slow drawl, Ted Creech, 6-foot coal mine boss from Kentucky's "Bloody Harlan" County, opened his defense from the witness stand in District Court yesterday, denying all charges of threats and perjury before the Senate Civil Liberties Committee in April.

Under examination by Defense Attorney William E. Leahy, Creech was asked if he threatened the life or attempted to bribe Richard C. Tackett, principal Government witness at the Senate hearings.

"Why, Mr. Leahy," answered Creech, "I wouldn't do a thing like that."

Just before resting its case, the prosecution introduced a "surprise" witness—Carl Williams, Pineville, Ky., miner—who said he was present in a Senate Office Building corridor when Creech allegedly threatened Tackett with "eight or ten years" in jail.

Explains Corridor Talk.

Under questioning by Assistant United States Attorney David Pine, Williams denied that Tackett admitted he was "drunk and messed things up" while testifying before the special investigating committee. It was this statement, attributed to Tackett by Creech, which resulted in the perjury charges.

Explaining the corridor incident, Creech told the jury:

"I came back from lunch with Boone Calloway (another Harlan miner) and saw Henry Lewis (Harlan County jailer) standing in the hallway. I went over and started talking to him. Tackett walked over and said something about how he had gotten drunk and messed things up.

"I said to Tackett: 'Yes, you messed things up and you messed up the Harlan coal operators, too. When you get back to Harlan they ought to give you 8 to 10 years for swearing to those lies.'"

Says Mistake Made.

A mistake in stenographic notes during his examination before the committee, said Creech, was responsible for his statement that "Tackett had gotten drunk and didn't know what he was talking about."

"I didn't say that Tackett didn't know what he was talking about," Creech explained, "I said I didn't know what he was talking about."

"I have always tried to tell the truth," Creech declared, "and I didn't willfully intend to tell an untruth before the committee. My remarks were apparently misinterpreted."

Although Tackett testified he didn't know Creech and never had met him, the defendant said he was introduced to Tackett in the Harlan County sheriff's office several years ago when both were deputy sheriffs. Creech said Tackett also had ridden with him in an automobile on occasions.

Judge Joseph W. Cox recessed the session until 10 a. m. today.

Montgomery's Namesake Honored

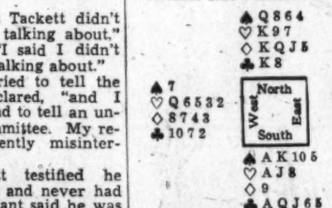
Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

"Sometimes it doesn't pay to be a good player," said South, mournfully, after he had played the hand below. "If I didn't pay attention to spot-cards I would have made my slam." South was correct. A poor player would have made the slam. Credit must be given to East for sizing up South's ability and for brilliantly seizing his opportunity.

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
4 N T	Pass	5 ♣	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened a low heart, and declarer let it ride around to his ten-ace. A brief survey of the combined hands revealed the fact that there was no way of avoiding the loss of the Ace of diamonds. South merely had to take care to lose no trump trick.

In accordance with the best technique, he laid down the Ace of spades at trick 2. East dropped the nine-spot, and South indulged in a little thought. South had intended to win the second trump trick with dummy's Queen. If both players followed, it would be a simple matter to draw a third round of trumps. If West showed out, a finesse would be established against East. He recognized from the start that four trumps to the Jack-9 in West's hand would defeat him.

When East's nine dropped on the first trump trick, however, it seemed to South that he had been presented with an opportunity to pick up four trumps to the Jack in West's hand, as apparently East had started with the doubleton Jack-9, or the singleton nine of trumps. In the former case there would be no difficulty in playing the trump suit. In the latter case it was vital for South to take the second trump trick in his own hand and then finesse dummy's eight of spades.

At trick three, therefore, South laid down the King of spades, and discovered that East's brilliant false-card had assured a trump trick to the defenders.

Filipino Denounces 'Any Foreign Yoke'

Manila, Nov. 30 (AP).—Shouting for a government "free from any foreign yoke," Commonwealth Vice President Sergio Osmena led the national heroes day celebration today.

He said vast resources of the Philippines, "unless developed under proper safeguards, may within a short period of time constitute an actual danger to our peace and tranquillity."

Captain Dutton Dead in West; Naval Officer

Heart Attack at Long Beach Fatal to Commander of Portland.

Capt. Benjamin Dutton, jr., 54, U. S. Navy, who was on duty early this year in the Office of Naval Operations prior to assuming command of the heavy cruiser, Portland, died yesterday, after collapsing at a Navy reception in Long Beach, Calif. Death was believed caused by a heart attack, the Associated Press said.

A native of Shippensburg, Pa., Capt. Dutton served here in the Bureau of Navigation from June, 1933, until April, 1935, when he went to Europe for duty as naval attache at Berlin with additional duty at Oslo, Norway; Copenhagen, Denmark; Stockholm, Sweden; The Hague, Netherlands, and Helsingfors, Finland.

He returned to Washington early in the year and left again last June to take command of the Portland.

Capt. Dutton graduated from the Naval Academy in 1905 and cruised around the world with the fleet aboard the battleship Kentucky. During the course of his naval career he also served as first lieutenant of the U. S. S. Kansas, as executive officer and navigator of the Machias and as executive officer of the Pueblo.

After the World War he was executive officer of the former German battleship, Osteniesland, which was placed in commission early in 1920 at Rosyth, Scotland, and brought to the United States with the former German light cruiser, Frankfurt, in tow.

Capt. Dutton, the author of "Navigation and Nautical Astronomy," a textbook used at the Naval Academy and in the merchant marine, had attended the Naval War College, Newport, R. I., and served on its staff. He also had headed the Department of Electrical Engineering at the Naval Academy.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Hildegarde Herwig Dutton, and his son, Lieut. (J. G.) William T. Dutton, who is attached to the U. S. S. New Orleans.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Happy News.

A. F. of L. Chief William Green must have been very glad yesterday after reading a missive dropped under his door by Henry C. Iler, national organizer for the American Federation of Government Employes. Federal workers, Green was told, are "flocking to join the A. F. of L. in ever increasing numbers," and can you think of anything in this life he had rather hear than that?

Iler returned yesterday from a month's canvas of the New England and New York districts and reported that the A. F. G. E.'s organization drive in those regions resulted in a gain of more than 2,800 members during the last month.

Wylie Retires.

Alexander Wylie, director of the Bureau of Accounts, ICC, for at least 20 years, left the service through retirement yesterday. He received many handshakes, some pretty parting gifts and heard some nice expressions from his fellow workers, assembled in his honor in room 2148 at 2:30 p. m.

He left the Federal Government, after a service of 28 years. Coming here from Chicago, his hometown, Wylie rose rapidly in the ICC. And all the time, he enlarged on his hobby in the fields of horticulture, taking an outstanding part in the Takoma Horticultural Club. He has been active also in Masonic circles and a faithful worker in the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church. Up to his parting hour yesterday, he had not disclosed what he will do in retirement—but his friends expect him to use every available hour in the pursuit of his hobby.

Entertainment.

The dress rehearsal at the Agriculture Auditorium Monday night gave promise of a delightful entertainment this evening and tomorrow evening when the Agriculture Players make their second appearance of this season in a series of one-act plays. Not only did every member of the different casts make the most of the part assigned to him or her, but all appeared to very fine advantage. All indications point to a successful performance. There is no admission charge.

Help Wanted.

John P. Simpson, ICC, who has taken an interest in the affairs of the Provident Association of Clerks (which flourished around 1817 and is now no more) is anxious to secure a copy of the report of the committee of the association appointed on May 10, 1823, to prepare plans to render the funds of the institution adequate to the objects for which they were intended. He understands that the report was printed in a 20-page pamphlet. Does anyone know where a copy of this report can be found?

Securities and Exchange Commission Local, No. 5, U. F. W. A., will hold a dance (9 to 1 a. m.) at the Powhatan Hotel tomorrow evening. The affair will be informal.

Premiere.

Now comes "The River" to Washington, after widely publicized successes in five cities of the Mississippi Valley—New Orleans, Memphis, Sta Louis, Des Moines and Minneapolis. The picture is a Farm Security Administration documentary film, and degins its run here with a premiere at the Rialto next Tuesday evening.

Those who can see it: Members of Congress, the Cabinet, the Judiciary, the Diplomatic Corps, Washington correspondents and civic leaders. The film was written and directed by Pare Lorentz, renowned film critic, who, incidentally, wrote and directed "The Plow That Broke the Plains." Virgil Thomson, concert pianist, wrote a special descriptive musical score for "The River." He is the composer of the opera, "Four Saints in Three Acts," for which Gertrude Stein wrote the libretto, undoubtedly holding that a Saint is a Saint is a Saint.

Mourice E. Sands, chairman, membership committee, New York State Society, writes us that the organization will hold its last dance of the year on Saturday, December 11, at the Shoreham Hotel.

Federal employes will entertain Federal employes tomorrow evening at a theater party sponsored by Local 2, N. F. F. E., at the Rialto. The entertainers: Ruth E. Coberly (Agriculture), who will sing; Barbara Jean and Dan O'Flaherty (Agriculture), singers; Helen L. Ensign (Veterans), accordion solo; Leon and Janet Lieberman (Labor), dancers; Walter Terrel and Company (General Accounting Office), will offer a play entitled "The Constant Lover;" S. Green (G. A. O.), imitations; Richard Stringfelllow and Florence Creel (G. A. O.) will offer a play, "The Gallant Lover," and a dance team of eight youngsters who will execute a military tap. The entire theater has been secured for the party. The public is invited. Lee H. Shugar is the entertainment chairman.

Farnsworth Loses Fight for Liberty

Gainesville, Ga., Nov. 30 (AP).—Federal Judge Underwood today denied the habeas corpus plea of John S. Farnsworth, former lieutenant commander in the Navy, now serving a 4-to-12-year sentence in Atlanta for conspiracy to furnish naval secrets to Japan.

Farnsworth claimed the indeterminate sentence law of the District of Columbia was not applicable to espionage cases. He contended also that he was illegally denied a jury trial when the judge refused to allow him to change his plea from nolo contendere (to stand mute) to one of not guilty.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

The Lowly Auto-Trailer Rises to Comic Eminence As the Farcical Locale of Gay 'Double Wedding'

William Powell and Myrna Loy Move Their Antic Humor to a Parking Lot in Film Coming to Capitol; Pies Are to Be Eaten; Frolics Planned for Current Week; Mr. Evans' Courage; Notes of the Theater.

IN "DOUBLE WEDDING" Washington moviegoers will encounter one of those utterly frivolous nonsensicalities that end in much the same sort of free-for-all melee that characterized the closing dock battle in "Big City"—except that all of New York seems to be in this one, instead of merely all of New York's taxi drivers and a fine assortment of cauliflower plucked from Jack Dempsey's ornate beanery.

The story centers in an auto-trailer and the tangled affairs of a gay young artist who runs afoul of a youthful romance, engineered by the methodical older sister of the prospective bride. The course of true love may never run smooth, but it seldom hits upon such rough going as jounces it around in this flippant farce. No custard pies are thrown about in this one, but virtually everything else that isn't red hot or nailed down is bounced off William Powell's durable cranium at one time or another.

BELL.

And yet, "Double Wedding" is not too slapstick. There is a sound basis of free-thinking and freer individual action upon which to rear the comic structure through which Mr. Powell and Myrna Loy romp in their highly successful effort to learn about love on a parking lot. Lest it escape you when the picture is seen, watch for the scene in which the haughty Miss Loy does a remarkably faithful imitation of Billie Burke at her most flittery. I cannot evade the thought that Miss Loy should have made this an item in her performance of the role of the whimsical Miss Burke which she played in "The Great Ziegfeld."

Those who previewed this crazy release yesterday afternoon were impressed with the fact, however, that the stars of the "Thin Man" series are not the only ones who turn in agile performances. Jessie Ralph, Katherine Alexander, Florence Rice, Sidney Toler, Edgar Kennedy and, above all, John Beal also have themselves a time—and will give you one. The meek Mr. Beal and the meeker Donald Meek achieve a fine mess of "yumph" in that final sequence, which, of course, is not to be confused with any mere "umph." Or perhaps it is.

But where is that perky pup known to fame by the names of both "Asta" and "Mr. Smith?" This sort of business, in a manner of speaking, is right up his alley. Sorry no see in this one.

* * * *

And speaking of custard pies—we were somewhere back there, if you got that far—Master Ray Bell (still no relation) has thought up a new use for this delectable bit of the pastry cook's art. He sends them around to the drayma desks now as a reminder that they no longer are implements of fun in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer comedies, but are to be looked upon henceforth as items of diet—or the absence of it. The coconut custard meringue confection left on our desk, therefore, was cautiously cut, lest it turn out to be some sort of "gag" loaded with dynamite, and put to its intended use. So far, no one in the family has died. Given courage by this happy circumstance, I am prompted to suggest to Mr. No Relation that I once saw a comedy in which casaba melons, patie de foie gras and vintage champagne were hurled about with abandon, aplomb, eclat and pretty good aim. They also are supposed to be eaten and drunk. Same address, Ray, and you needn't even bother to lee the melons or the wine!

Tonight and Friday are the nights. I mean to say that Hollywood is creeping up on the National Capital this week with two events of unique design.

Tonight at 8:30, in the auditorium of the National Press Club, Senator William Gibbs McAdoo is hosting his senatorial colleagues and other invited guests at a preview screening of "Nothing Sacred," in which Carole Lombard and Frederic March will occupy the screen at Loew's Palace as soon as that "Firefly" flashes on to other fields. This, one gathers, is Senator McAdoo's reciprocal gesture to those of his associates who from time to time toss parties to ballyhoo the major products of their own States—beef barbecues, erster roasts, pot likker, watermelons, hot dogs or what have you. Moom pitchers being the principal product of California—well, you get the idea.

Friday night's jamboree will take the form of one of those vaunted "Hollywood permeers," celebrating the opening of "Double Wedding" and the "Hollywood Hotel Revue" stage show, at the Capitol. F street will be all torched up with giant lights, bunting and the usual hurrah, and all of Washington is invited to come down and make life miserable for the traffic cops. It is even bruited about, as the saying is, that if you watch closely you may be able to pick some familiar Hollywood faces out of the crowd.

Personally, me, I hope mine will be Madeleine Carroll's!

* * * *

Seldom has a stage star the temerity—if you can do with so sudden a change of pace—to surround himself with such a sterling group of classic actors as support Maurice Evans in Shakespeare's tragic drama of "King Richard II," current at the National. Mr. Evans has seen fit to pit his own completely superior talents against the stalwart abilities of such commanding actors as Frederick Warlock, Lee Baker, Lionel Hogarth, Winston O'Keefe, Donald Randolph, Charles Dalton, Reynolds Evans and numerous others who, in concert, offer a very genuine challenge to any individual eminence, no matter how distinguished. In so doing, Mr. Evans has insured the rounded perfection of the most impressive production of a Shakespeare play seen in this generation. Of all these brilliant thespians, Lee Baker, the John of Gaunt, has been most recently seen in the Capital. He will be agreeably remembered by observant playgoers as the judge whose reason was unseated by rumination over his disputed death sentence, with Burgess Meredith and Margot, in Maxwell Anderson's grim play of "Winterset." It would be pleasant if all these able gentlemen might be seen here more often.

* * * *

A helpful correspondent sends in a solution of a very present problem, clipped from a recent issue of the Wall Street Journal, in the matter of ladies' (?) hats in theaters.

Before each performance, it seems, a certain theater flashes this notice upon the screen: "The management wishes to spare elderly ladies inconvenience. They are invited to retain their hats."

There follows a general stampede to remove every piece of feminine headgear in the place!

Rising-Blood-Pressure Note.

Dynamite.

The dangerous business of handling high explosives in commerce is dealt with at length in "Danger Patrol," new RKO Radio melodramatic film which features Sally Eilers, John Beal and Harry Carey.

Scene Shouter.

Reginald Owen is called upon to shout at least once in every scene in which he appears in "Everybody Sing."

"Pa was sore at the publicity regarding our marriage," Ernest Simpson confides "Not so much at the amount of publicity, but because the papers said he was 92. He's only 84." . . . "Gertrude McClintic, producer of 'Star-Wagon,' and Maxwell Anderson, its author, went to see their play last week." Eve Abbott states at Ruby Foo's. "They couldn't get tickets. Mr. Anderson had to go backstage and listen to it there. Mr. McClintic sat on the stairway in the orchestra—but was chased by the fireman" . . . "Why shouldn't I like Florida?" Broadway's C. C. Green asserts at the Whirling Top, "if it was good enough for guys like Rockefeller, who lived to be a stunning 97 years, and for guys like Mellon, who rolled up a smart 88."

5 A. M. "In this phony draw-poker game," Goodman Ace reports at Lindy's, "the sucker was dealt four aces. He became suspicious—that if he stood pat, the cards had been stacked to give another player a straight flush. So he drew three cards, spoiled the draw, and won the hand on a lone pair of aces" . . . "We revised our Hold Obituaries today," an editor reports at Dave's. "The biggest one is Mussolini's. We'd give him four complete pages. Next in importance is Roosevelt, then Hitler" . . . A screen star, glowing radiantly, enters. "I wonder if she'd be as radiant," the editor states gruesomely, "if she knew that today I revised HER obituary, too?"

In Hollywood

With Jimmy Fiddler

Hollywood, Nov. 30.—Idol chatter: When Robert Taylor tries to look forceful, he usually succeeds in looking petulant. Betty Furness started wearing those high hats because she lifted them—and kept on wearing them because they brought her so much publicity. Saddest sight in town: "The Ritz Brothers" at a football game, with a potential audience of thousands—and everyone watching the game. People who pan Hollywood's claim to the life intellectual might modify their opinions if they attended a Saturday evennig party at Gloria Stuart's. If Santa Claus were clean shaven, he would look a lot like Guy Kibbee.

ELEANOR POWELL

* * * *

Odd that the screen's most beautiful women almost invariably marry homely men. Eleanor Powell's imitation of Jimmy Stewart on the occasion of their first date is almost as amusing as Jimmy's imitation of Virginia Bruce on a similar occasion. Look-alikes when serious: Adrienne Ames and Loretta Young: Hollywood is full of people who prate about "art"—but you seldom see an actor in an art salon. Miscasting famous pictures: How about Mae West in Peter Pan?

* * * *

Some stars reduce via the exercise route—Grace Moore gets quicker results by a strained vegetable juice. Glenda Farrell's left eyebrow has a habit of asking "So what? Wonder if Frances Farmer keeps that haughty smile in the refrigerator when it is not in use. Carole Lombard always reminds me of the miner whose language Bret Harte described as "frequent, painful and free."

Set-visited with Miriam Hopkins, who had an amusing anecdote to tell about her recently acquired husband, Director Anatole Litvak. Seems a studio photographer came to her home to take pictures. Litvak was there, but, after exchanging pleasantries, he made it a point to leave the room, explaining that he carefully avoids any interference in his wife's work. "We made several pictures!" Miriam said, "and then, as I expected, Anatole slipped unobtrusively back into the living room.

3 D. C. Teams Lead Women's Bridge Match

Mrs. Lemon's Group Tops First Session When Score Is Revised.

By Marian H. Barre.

Three Washintgon teams were in the lead at the conclusion of the initial session of the women's team match, played yesterday afternoon at the Shoreham. Thirteen teams competed, a record enrollment in the women's event. The players included feminine stars from all parts of the country.

The score was first posted giving the lead to the team composed of Mrs. A. J. Steinberg, Mrs. C. W. Zimmer, Mrs. F. Samuel and Mrs. B. Robins, with 19 boards won, about a 60 per cent game computed in match points. The team of Mrs. James Lemon, Mrs. R. C. Young, Mrs. Martin B. West and Mrs. A. P. Stockvis had 18½ boards, and two other teams tied for thrid place with 17½ boards. They were the team captained by Mrs. Van Nuys, wife of the Senator from Indiana, playing with Mrs. Winslow Van Devanter, teamed with Mrs. C. Murray Hall and Mrs. Charles Kavanaugh, and the team from Pittsburgh consisting of Mrs. Hilda Stahl, Miss Margaret Beech, Miss Janet Hardie and Miss Clara Morris.

Later Mrs. Lemon's team was granted a mistake in recording and given 19½ boards, putting it in first place. This foursome is the cream of the Washington entries. Mrs. Lemon and Mrs. West were runners-up in women's pairs at the Asbury tournament and have won numerous championships. Mrs. Stockvis is the leading woman master player in the District. Mrs. Young is a Philadelphian and the favorite partner of Charles Goren, now the ranking master in the country.

Mrs. Steinberg's team first came into prominence at the Washington Bridge League team classic. With the exception of Mrs. Zimmer, the members have limited tournament experience outside of Washington. They play straight down the middle and have the advantage of partnership practice.

The Coast-to-Coast team of Mrs. Robert B. Fuller, defending champions, finished the session in fifth place, having won 16 boards. The team of Official Ladies tied for sixth with a team headed by Mrs. Anne Rosenfeld, of Cleveland.

Only eight entered in the newspapermen's individual contest and the event was finished in one session. The Remington portable was won by George Beynon, of New York, representing the Bridge World. Frank B. Lord, of the Washington Star and H. M. Byrnes, of the Harrisburg Telegraph, tied for second place with 15 match points, a point under Beynon.

Two amateur games were held during the afternoon session. A 7-table practice game was won by Lewis Tubbs and Lester Johnson, with 69½ match points, Maj. and Mrs. Charles Brice scoring 62 points for second place. Mrs. Menne B. Barry and Mrs. Ralph Woodside were top in a 5-table amateur event. John W. Gardner, jr., and Harold Acker, runners-up, broke the record for all-Washington leaders in every game.

The Federal Bridge League game was played in two sections, 11 pairs in one section and 13 pairs in the other. Results follow:

Section C, North-South results. Winners, Kay Davitt, of Scranton, Pa., and J. M. Lazard, 137 match points; second, Mrs. Katherine Fenton and A. L. Scott, 125 match points; third, R. Aukshun and George Hill, 123 match points; East-West, first, Elah Saunders and Elaine Carlson, 141 match points; second, Mrs. Bolivar Lloyd and Mrs. M. R. Reddy, 135 match points.

Section D, North-South results. First, C. C. McDonnell and J. C. Walker, 186 match points; second, H. R. King and Isaac York, 162 match points. East-West, First, Mrs. G. C. Wolfson, of Brooklyn, and Mrs. S. Otner, of Elklyn, N. Y., 166 match points; second, M. J. Strasberger and Homer E. Au, 164½ match points; third, Mrs. D. M. McConkey and Mrs. George Livingstone, both of York, Pa., 143 match points.

Mrs. Lemon's team, winner in the women's team matches, was brought a bottom score on board 46, a swing board that was played by Mrs. Stahl, of the Pittsburgh team at 7 notrump. The success of her contract depended on the heart finesse. Six notrump is a safer spot. The board as played: being brought up under a "Culbertson system" in collaboration with several famous educators. When the divorce is granted, custody will be shared equally, it was announced last night in New York.

Ely Culbertsons Part; She Seeks Reno Divorce

Mental cruelty will be the grounds on which the divorce will be asked, counsel for the Culbertsons said, due to the famous bridge player's "ultra-temperamental moods," and also because he is about to publish a "brutally frank" autobiography to "teach my children how not to do certain things."

For the support of herself and their children, Culbertson has voluntarily transferred one-half of his property to his wife, it was announced. Based on a five-year average and income already assured for 1938, it was estimated each would receive more than $100,000 annually in salaries and profits.

Under an irrevocable will, Culbertson must leave half of their holdings to Mrs. Culbertson, on the condition that neither child, upon reaching a majority, may receive more than $400 monthly. The remainder of the estate will revert to a scientific foundation for research in physics.

"Josephine has always been the grand romance in my life," said Culbertson last night, "and she always will be."

"This is not a case of 'another woman' or 'another man.' Unfortunately I am a married man with bachelor instincts."

Still my Favorite Partner.

Culbertson said complete solitude was often his "most precious and necessary" requirement.

"In those moments I am a solitary animal, and, if disturbed, I become unbearable," explained he. "Any woman who marries a really unsocial man of my type, with his solitary yearnings and attacks of abstract meditation will sooner or later find her marriage is on the rocks.

"The wonder to me is not that Jo is divorcing me now, but that she was able to stand my temperamental outbursts all these years. Well, anyway, Jo is still my favorite bridge partner."

Before she left for Reno Saturday, Mrs. Culbertson issued a statement which said:

"Ely is a very good father and a loyal partner; he will remain my friend and I will continue to work with him, but his temperamental moods make it impossible for me to live with him.

"But Ely is still my favorite partner."

Editor Cites '94 Post Forecast Of Airships in Address on News

An article on "Europe's Coming War" from The Washington Sunday Post of April 8, 1894, was cited last night as an illustration of intelligent newspaper anticipation by Felix Morley, editor of The Post.

Mr. Morley was lecturing at Brookings Institution on the subject, "Back of the European News."

Saying he had come across the article while examining The Post files in connection with the sixtieth anniversary edition to be issued Monday, Mr. Morley cited what he called a "remarkably prophetic" extract from it written more than 20 years before the outbreak of the World War.

The quotatoin follows:

"As there evidently is to be no humane limit to methods of destruction in the next great war, it would not be wonderful should airships be used to rain down destruction from the skies upon the enemy."

"In spite of this example of prescience," said Mr. Morley, "it would be a bold newspaperman who would attempt to forecast the outcome of the present world crisis.

"The problem today is not so much a conflict between nations as one between the opposing theories of autocracy and democracy from which no legislative neutrality policy can possibly isolate the United States."

Telegraph Union Wins Wage Pact

An agreement with the Postal Telegraph Company, recognizing the American Radio Telegraphist Association was reported by union members last night, after a conference with Thomas P. Dowd, Postal superintendent, Harry I. Gilbert, his assistant superintendent.

John Austin, local C. I. O. district organizer, of which the union is an affiliate, said the union won a weekly pay day for employes, two weeks notice for all lay-offs and furloughs, and agreement to hire no new employes until laid off workers were put back to work on a full time basis.

In an election ordered by the National Labor Relations Board, employes of the Hay-Adams House, the Annapolis and Hamilton Hotels, voted to join the Hotel Restaurant Employes International Alliance, Local No. 80, by a vote of almost 85 per cent.

Another union group, Local 781, the Cooks, Waiters, and Waitresses Local already represents the workers at the Annapolis Hotel. Local 80 will represent the maids, bellman, doormen, painters, telephone operators, cigar stand clerks, elevator operators, timekeepers, and housemen in all three hotels.

Huguely Estate Put at $1,440,000

Mrs. Mabel Huguely, widow of George W. Huguely, and her son, George W. Huguely, jr., are principal beneficiaries of the $1,440,000 estate left by the lumberman when he died November 2, it was learned yesterday when a petition for probate of his will was filed in District Court.

The will directed that a trust fund of $40,000 be created for benefit of Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Austin, a sister, and stipulated that after her death a niece, Marion Austin, is to receive the income.

Ten Days Given to Move Blimp Shed at Airport

Ten days were granted Washington Airport and the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. yesterday by the Virginia corporation commission in which to draft a voluntary plan for the removal of the blimp hangar now standing on the edge of the landing field.

To increase the safety of operations, the State regulatory body issued a rule requiring all airplanes using the field to be equipped after December 10 with "a radio receiving set in good operating condition."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Leopold Stokowski conducts the Philadelphia Orchestra, with Louis Krasner as soloist, in Constitution Hall Tuesday night. Program: "Festival of Mardi Gras" from "Petrushka" (Stravinski), Symphony No. 1 (Shostakovich), Concerto for violin (Alban Berg), Excerpts from "Boris Godunov" (Musorgski).

Leopold Stokowski's only visit to Washington this saeson was welcomed last evening by a capacity audience in Constitution Hall. Be it said to the credit of those serried auditors that, however many of them had been attracted by the conductor rather than by the program, they listened attentively to some modern idioms not readily comprehensible, and applauded with an enthusiasm that spoke their appreciation of the splendid performance, whatever they may have thought of the musical values. The esoteric phrases of Alban Berg were received as heartily as were the naive utterances of Musorgski.

The virtuosity of the orchestrical instrument upon which Stokowski plays is a guarantee of eloquence, whether the music is simple or complex, and its vitality is as notable as its skill. In the tonal color, whether resplendent or dimmed, there is always a glow, and the slightest melodic line is as clear as a full-bodied choir. The senstiiveness of the players make instantaneous response to the guiding gesture.

Of primary importance on the program was the extraordinary violin concert of Alban Berg, interpreted with affectionate care and poetic insight by Louis Krasner. To discuss this work adequately in a review written hurriedly against the coming of midnight is impossible, for it presents many fascinating aspects. The unfamiliarity of the twelve-tone idiom challenges at the outset an attention which is seeking an easy entrance to the meaning, and it is only in recollection that the significance of many passages becomes evident.

In his remarkable use of the twelve-tone "row" Berg surpassed Schoenberg, the master from whom he derived it. Moreover, he combined technical ingenuity, which is apt to be emotionally sterile, with intense feeling. The work is in essence, as well as in form, a fusion of concerto and symphonic poem, and its unquestionable sincerity stamps it a masterpiece. One may view it as absolute music if one wills, but one cannot escape its mysteriously moving quality nor evade its haunting hints of supernatural vision.

This strangely beautiful music appeared in the company of more mundane compositions: the brilliant, turbulent and humorous Mardi Gras scene from Stravinski's "Petrushka," the impertinent yet engaging first symphony of Dmitri Shostakovich, and the excellent synopsis of "Boris Godunov," contrived by Stokowski from Musorgski's original score.

Stravinski was at the height of his powers when he wrote "Petrushka," which makes some of his later works seem sadly anemic. "Petrushka" palpitates with life and dances with the gayety of fancy. Its conceits are quick with imagination and the music sparkles in every measure.

HOW TO GOVERN THE DISTRICT
Ex-Governor Shepherd's Opinion Concerning It—The Hendee Bill.
COLUMBIA BUILDING
Yesterday's Work of the District Commissioners.

For 60 Years, the Problem of D. C. Government Has Made Headlines

The story of the growth, development and government of the District of Columbia has been news ever since the first edition of The Washington Post. Edward Folliard reviews the headlines of 60 years in his article on the District which will be one of the most interesting things in the Sixtieth Anniversary Edition of The Washington Post.

Other articles in this number will give the history of sports, music, education, churches, society, politics, and The Post itself. Don't fail to get a copy of this edition! Phone NAtional 4200.

Reducing Federal Aid.

Opposition to any cut in Federal funds for highway construction was anticipated. This Federal aid program has been especially popular in the Western States, and of course it has reflected popularity upon legislators responsible for its perpetuation. But Congress ought not to be swayed by this political factor when the stern necessity of balancing the Federal budget arises.

Everyone may be expected to agree with Senator Hayden's contention that Congress should not repudiate its "contractual obligations." But there is a vast difference between "repudiation" and mere postponement of appropriations tentatively promised to the States. With respect to the highway fund authorizations for the fiscal year 1938, the President merely proposes to extend the payments over a longer period. Since the appropriations have not been definitely made, that course seems to be entirely fair and reasonable.

Outright cancellation of the authorizations for Federal-aid roads during the fiscal year 1939 is recommended. But if Congress acts before January 1, as the President suggests, the change will be made before the Secretary of Agriculture is required to apportion that fund among the States. Highway departments of the States can scarcely be said to have a claim upon potential grants that have neither been allocated nor appropriated.

The proposed slash of highway funds may be unfortunate from the viewpoint of States which have developed plans on the basis of authorizations in the present act. But that only emphasizes the importance of repealing that section of the law which requires the Government to apportion to the States the annual amounts authorized for distribution before the money has been actually appropriated. Certainly Congress ought not thus to be committed in advance to an obligation that may be very difficult to pay.

To the vigorous objections raised against these changes only one reply is essential: It is far more important to balance the Federal budget, after eight years of deficits, than to continue generous outlays to aid highway construction. If Congress is willing to face that issue realistically, there should be little doubt as to the outcome.

Incidentally, while these changes are being effected Congress should make provision for the District of Columbia to obtain a fair share of the highway fund. At present this is the only area in the country which is arbitrarily excluded from the benefits of the act.

A Call For Tax Revision.

What Senator Harrison said in his radio address about the inhibiting effect upon business enterprise of the taxes on undistributed profits and capital gains is by now a matter of common knowledge. However, he made a new and valuable contribution to discussion of this subject by pointing out that revision of these taxes, instead of resulting in loss of needed revenues, may actually increase tax receipts.

His reasoning is thoroughly sound. It is based upon a belief that the taxes in question have retarded industrial progress and slowed up trade, with the result that income which might have yielded tax revenues has not been earned or realized. For example, a corporation forced to disburse dividends needed to expand its operations may be seriously handicapped, even to the point of suspending operations. At best, it is prevented from placing orders for new capital equipment and thus, directly and indirectly, giving employment to labor.

Punitive taxes on capital gains likewise prevent that rapid turnover of trade and free flow of capital into new enterprises which is essential to a growing and prosperous industrial society. That means less taxable income to be levied upon.

In other words, Senator Harrison is simply calling attention to the fact that taxes are based on ability of enterprise to pay. If that ability to pay is progressively impaired by unwise tax systems, the time eventually comes when increased rates of taxation yield diminishing returns. If the point of diminishing returns has already been reached, as Senator Harrison states, in taxation of undistributed profits and capital gains, their modification will raise no serious problem of finding substitute forms of taxation.

That is the cheerful conclusion to be deduced from the statement of the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Two Dangerous Farm Bills.

There are many differences in detail between the House and Senate farm bills, but in respect to their general purpose and the character of the control methods proposed, they are discouragingly alike. The Senate bill is conceded to be more drastic because the control measures are stricter and penalties for noncompliance more severe. But disregarding these superficial differences, both measures would set up a permanent and far-reaching system of control over agriculture by compulsory limitations of acreage and establishment of marketing quotas for four basic crops—cotton, wheat, corn and tobacco—as well as rice.

Ostensibly the compulsory control features of the proposed legislation are subject to a referendum vote of the farmers concerned. But as Representative Andresen said in course of the House debate, speaking of the cotton provisions, no grower could afford to stay out and thus lose the benefit payments and subsidies promised him under the program.

The scope, complexity and bewildering detail of the farm bills pass description. Intelligent debate is necessarily limited to a very few experts in House and Senate. The average member will be tempted to confine his interest to those sections of the bills that chiefly concern the people of his own State or district. That, however, is a tendency likely to have unfortunate results. It inclines legislators to judge the farm control plan not from the national viewpoint but from that of narrowly provincial and selfishly short-sighted special interest groups.

This attitude is obviously dangerous, for it diverts attention from the major issue involved in the farm control program, namely, the feasibility and desirability of a regimented agriculture directed from Washington by officials exercising wide administrative discretion. Both House and Senate bills rely upon these presumably omniscient individuals to impose acreage limitations for the curtailment of basic crops, ignoring the fact that this method of control has been shown to be ineffective. Both bills would confer upon the regulatory authorities powers calling for the gift of prophecy as well as superhuman knowledge.

Under the guise of a soil conservation plan, it is proposed to shift millions of acres of land from production of certain basic crops to other uses by rewards and threats of punishment. The cost of this system has not been appraised by those who devised it and its effects are of course unforeseeable. However, in so far as the aim of raising prices of our leading export crops is achieved, it is obvious that fresh dislocations will result from loss of foreign markets.

Moreover, the belief that agricultural output can be regulated by acreage control ignores one of the chief determinants of the size of a crop—the weather. Natural forces cannot be relied upon to follow a plan worked out by the astutest minds of the Department of Agriculture. But even if the planners were 100 per cent correct in their guesses as to what the sun and wind, the floods and droughts of the future would add to or subtract from their estimates, their activities would be a doubtful blessing.

The major issue is whether the farmers of the United States want to subject themselves to the decrees of a group of bureaucrats who tell them how much and what to plant, how much to sell and how much to store. This substitution of official orders for independent initiative is not the American way of doing things and is quite likely unconstitutional. It is a system based upon the belief that a few men in authority know better than the many engaged in active nongovernmental pursuits how to direct and control the economic processes of the Nation. It assumes that the adjustments made under a relatively free system of production and exchange are inferior to political control.

In brief, the bills now before Congress would impose upon the country a system of agricultural control that would do credit to Nazi Germany or Communist Russia. If agriculture is forced into such a straitjacket, it will be only a matter of time until similar regimentation is extended to industry and labor. Such a system is inherently antagonistic to democratic principles and practices.

Watching Trade Negotiations.

Although Canada and the United States have not yet taken even the first formal steps to revise and expand their reciprocal trade agreement, protests have already arisen on both sides of the border.

Thus former Premier R. B. Bennett has already come out with a prediction that the contemplated agreement "will be the harbinger of discord and conflict" and will result in unemployment in the Dominion to a greater extent than ever before."

This is certainly a case of crying before being hurt. But the fact that critics are alert on both sides of the border will encourage scrutiny of every proposed concession.

There is no reason to suppose that either the Canadian government or ours has any intention of injuring the interests of producers within their borders. On the contrary, each industry affected will be given a chance to have its say before negotiations are concluded, with both sides moving slowly and warily.

To be sure, if any Canadian-American agreement is to be worth the paper it will be written on concessions will have to be made by both sides. And it can be taken for granted that even the least concession will stir up criticism from persons who believe themselves adversely affected. But if such an agreement means the expansion of the trade of the two nations, the general welfare will in each instance be advanced.

Fruits Of The Triangle.

It is almost a year since Japan gave de facto recognition to the Italian conquest of Ethiopia by reducing her legation at Addis Ababa to a consulate.

But only now has Italy repaid Japan in kind by recognizing the independence of Manchukuo, the puppet state carved out of China by the island empire in violation of the Nine-Power Treaty, the Briand-Kellogg Pact and the League of Nations Covenant. These solemn agreements Italy, too, is pledged to uphold.

In once again disregarding her commitments, Italy is acting in the same manner and spirit that characterized her conduct in East Africa and, latterly, in Spain. And the Rome government's gesture of amity to Japan is about to be followed by Tokyo's recognition of the Franco regime. In the newly created Fascist bloc one hand attempts to wash the other. Whereas, hitherto, each of the three partners of the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo triangle has independently carried out its treaty-smashing policies, they now give notice of doing so in concert, at least of giving each other as large a measure of support as possible.

Not that Italy's recognition of Manchukuo is in itself of any great importance. Italy's trade with the puppet state is negligible. And it is doubtful whether any large number of nations will follow Rome's lead. Manchukuo was set up in 1934. But aside from Italy the only states that have recognized the puppet regime are Japan and El Salvador.

The real importance of the Italian action lies in the evident determination of the triangle powers to use that triangle for blackmailing purposes. In this connection it is more than a coincidence that Italy's move regarding Manchukuo occurred on the very day that British and French statesmen were meeting in London to discuss ways and means of easing existing international tensions.

It is no secret that both Great Britain and France are willing to pay a good price for peace. They are in a mood for concessions, at least to Germany and Italy. The Italian maneuver is a clear indication to the great European democracies that the price for Italian good will must be a generous one since Italy has a nuisance value not only in Europe but also in the Far East.

It is not unlikely that the Anglo-French will to peace may be blocked by the excessive demands of the aggressor nations. Indeed, the evident readiness of the democratic powers to buy off the troublemakers may only mean a jacking up in the latter's purchase price to the point where neither London nor Paris will be willing to go.

Moving Mountain.

There is no Los Angeles directory handy, but it is reasonably certain that no Mahomet lives there. Nevertheless, a mountain is reported moving on the outskirts of the Angel City. And, true to the West Coast tradition of reducing everything to ems and picas, a press agent has been hired to chronicle the event. What's more, he is probably the only California ballyhooer who is fully justified in using such terms as "moving," "stirring" and "colossal."

Dame Nature could not have casually selected Los Angeles for this phenomenon. She must have wanted to show those Hollywood people a trick or two in distorting time. They have been pretty proud of their new apparatus which can photograph the opening of a rose and reproduce in a few seconds a development actually requiring days or weeks. With her mountain, Nature is doing much the same sort of thing. Its crumbling is merely speed-up of the earth's constant paroxysms.

The Atlantic Coast, it is well known, is sinking slowly; in compensation perhaps, the western edge of the continent rises. In a million years probably Washington will be under water, in a million years the eroding Sierra Madre and San Bernardino ranges may have smothered over today's Pacific seaboard. And it must be remembered that a million years is hardly one frame in the film of Nature's camera.

An Evansville woman in suit for divorce claims her husband has given her only 50 cents since they were married, and that was four years ago. Our first impulse was to pass harsh judgment on this man, but on second thought we're not going to do it. She may have squandered a part of the 50 cents.

To raise funds for a building, co-eds at Syracuse University collect fees from their escorts for good-night kisses. A general adoption of this plan would quickly solve the national housing problem.

English In The Schools.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: And so Prof. Janet Aiken indicts the President's English! If Prof. Aiken is such a stickler for pure English why does not she and her fellow teachers instill it into the millions of students who, yearly, pass through their hands? More slovenly English is heard today than ever before despite the advances of so-called modern education. Not one school child in a hundred is taught the rudiments of grammar at school. These same children can be taught to count; why can't they be taught to speak correctly?

While I have no statistics at hand, I will say that it is possible that fully half the children now attending school come from homes where they do not hear the English language spoken in its purest sense; this being true, why are not these pupils taught in the schoolrooms to use their verbs, adverbs and pronouns in the correct way?

Can it be that it is so difficult a task that the teacher passes it by entirely, and the pupil passes out of her class, with no working knowledge of English? There is no excuse for American teachers whose pupils say "I ain't got no," "I seen," "I taken," "them potatoes," "me and her," "I ain't saw it," etc.

When howls go up over the plight of the poor down-trodden teacher whose underpaid state brings tears of anguish to the eyes of many, I find myself unable to squeeze out even the smallest crocodile drop; listening to America trying to speak English has developed an unsympathetic streak in me. It is my belief that the teaching profession is the most over-rated and the most overpaid group of persons in the Nation, taking them as a whole and arriving at this verdict on the basis of value received.

As long as glaring horrors of speech continue in this day of specialized education, the indictment lies at the doors of the teachers who have the molding of young minds in their hands. Prof. Aiken should sweep around her own steps, and let the syntax of the President alone. DIDO.

Camouflaging Fascism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Gen. Amos A. Fries, at a recent meeting of the Sons of the American Revolution, District of Columbia Society, made a statement that deserves the thoughful attention of every American citizen at this time. He pointed out that the Fascists in this country are using an old and time-honored ruse, that of directing attention to some other menace, in order to distract attention from their own activities.

Fascism, the general said, is the big danger that we must look out for, and if we are alert the Fascists will pull the wool over our eyes by shouting about the dangers of communism, meanwhile, getting in their own deadly work.

He performs a distinct public service, I believe, in issuing this timely and well-reasoned warning. CITIZEN.

Tipping.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Relative to your discussion on tipping, allow me to recall another of its supposed origin: In a certain old English inn a little box hung on the wall bearing the words, "To Insure Promptness." Coins dropped in this box insured special attention to the guest placing one there. Later the words became abbreviated to "TIP."

If tipping were still "to insure promptness" its purpose and practice would be justified. But its prevalence has prostituted its object. It has become such a common practice that it usually constitutes either a bribe or a form of racket.

Just as the artist declares "All decoration is no decoration," so constant tipping loses its meaning. Too often it tends to deflect the employer's duty to his employe and, in turn, to measure or "shortchange" the employe's duty to a guest or customer. C. L. JOHN.

The Maxwell Trial.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I heartily agree with the letter signed by "An American Woman" in The Post of November 18, and think a great injustice has been done Edith Maxwell.

I believe she did not get a fair trial and I think it is the duty of every fair minded man and woman to petition the Governor of Virginia for her freedom. I would be eager to sign such a petition.

LOVER OF FAIR PLAY.

Washington, Nov. 19.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was good to see your letter entitled "Maxwell Verdict" in your issue of November 15, and others since. Certainly no one ever had a more prejudiced trial from first to last than Edith Maxwell and never was a more unjust verdict ever rendered—a disgrace to the State of Virginia.

Because of ill health I am unable to join a group to appeal to the Governor for a pardon but I hope others will.

A Republican Viewpoint.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some Washington commentators have been saying recently that Republican leaders at the Capitol have been perturbed by the effort on the part of some people to start a buildup for former President Herbert Hoover for the Republican Presidential nomination in 1940.

Why should this be? After all, the Hoover Administration, as in the case of the Coolidge Administration that preceded it, was outstanding for its accomplishment in reducing the public debt. It was Hoover also who inaugurated the RFC, the only one of the alphabetical stunts so plethorical in Washington today worth its salt.

The Hoover Administration in retrospect is not so bad after all. Defeated, yes, but so was Grover Cleveland, who came back. Times changed and some things that look bad today look good tomorrow, after we have had a taste of something else—the New Deal, for instance.

But this is neither a boost nor an apology for Herbert Hoover. He needs no apology and his friends will take care of the boosting. What we challenge is the statement that Republican leaders are worried by the effort of some people to push Mr. Hoover to the front. Let them push. The Republican Party needs and can use Mr. Hoover and his friends and others like them.

The Republican national convention will name the ticket and write the platform, and the nominees of that convention will be elected.

It is a mistake for Republicans to be gun-shy, shooing this one and tushing that one; the field should be open and no attempt made to muzzle any one, be he candidate or friend of a candidate.

Furthermore, the Republicans should not be stampeded by isms—Republicanism is all the party needs. A party that has supplied most of the brains and administrative genius under which this country has grown great over the years, does not have to reach out for new labels—liberal, progressive, standpat and what have you. Progressive, yes; but not in the way that some people construe that term. Stand-pat, yes; but again not in the common acceptance of that word.

A party that has always handled the affairs of the day in a common-sense manner, legislating for the best interests of the people as a whole all the time, need not and should not be misled by special pleaders, or even writers who so glibly misuse the terms liberal, progressive, stand-pat and reactionary. Bus Service.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some headlines indicate that the Glover Park Citizens Association is satisfied with its bus service.

I am glad to know this is so, for I think it should be satisfied. From my position on the curb at Seventeenth and K streets, where each day I wait 20 minutes for the 4:35 Potomac Heights bus, I count numbers of buses going to Glover Park over half of them not well filled.

It should warm and cheer me on a cold day to know that the neighbors, at least, are getting excellent service and that they are satisfied. I will try to comfort myself with this reflection during my weary wait. MARY E. LAZENBY.

Attitude Toward Japan.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We hope for peace. China hoped for peace.

Most of our leading officials seem to be looking ahead with eyes open but a few are urging that the United States better be more submissive—not to start a war with Japan. Submissiveness does not always bring respect.

Some officials are going to the other extreme, urging the United States invoke the Kellogg Pact and Nine-Power Pact. But we must not use guns. We should tell Japan that she did not respect her solemn treaties; therefore we can not respect her exports or imports until Japan makes sufficient reparations of American property molested, injured, or destroyed. Moreover, she must stop aggression in China.

These are the minimum steps we should take. The plan above might save or prevent much suffering in the Philippines in the near future.

Roman Tinder.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your column "On Capitol Hill" carries the subhead: "Forum on Foreign Affairs Organized to Keep Congress Informed." This idea should return dividends to America.

But why not carry it a logical step further? Organize an information bureau to keep Congress informed as to domestic affairs?

Business now slumps as the result of five years' alternate kicks and fake stimulants administered by the witch doctors of the Deal.

How has Congress met this acute situation? With a first-inning filibuster, gradually expanding into a week's wide-open dawdle over such vital issues as the moral welfare of the Siberian whiffle-beetle, much petty "bickering," and a few flare-ups that gave promise before flickering out.

On such tinder have Romes burned. WALTER BAHNSEN.

Enough.

The postoffice at Enough, Mo., down in Iron County, southwest of Belgrade, is to be discontinued. The Washington County News prints the announcement at the top of its front page. And well it may—the passing of Enough from the Postal Guide is news which should give pause to every Missourian who takes pride in his State. For if Enough comes off the official list today, who can say what inroads the uncertain future may not make into Missouri's picturesque place names? Aid and Apex, Clever and Cooter, Huzzah and Ink all may be secure today, but how will they be faring tomorrow? What assurance is there that similar announcements may not strike Minimum and Novelty, Peculiar and Ponder, Racket and Rat, Stet and Success, and Speed and Wisdom from the rolls? Or Blooming Rose, or Cross Timbers, or Birdsong, or Braggadocio, or Zebra, or Rescue, or Useful, or many others which dot the countryside of Missouri?

Enough may have come to the end of the rope, and the maintenance there of a postoffice may have become an unjustified expense. And yet its passing must not open the way for a slaughter of colorful place names. Enough is enough.

Autumn Interlude

YESTERDAY, I sought fringed gentians. An amber afternoon of sunshine after showers. A gentle breeze lazily wafting myriads of red and yellow leaves. The air warm and balmy. A mellow lightness reflecting autumn's "bright blue weather."

East from the village ridge, I made my way down through the abandoned orchard where gnarled trees stand brave with old-fashioned apples—lemon pippins and big red bakers. Many already on the ground glistening in the grass. A wary old woodchuck, hearing my footsteps and lumbering along from one hole to another. Not so much frightened as annoyed that I should be trespassing in his domain. One entrance near the stone wall, another under a pile of apple tree chunks and still another in the middle of a lot. A network of tunneling of which Tubby Woodchuck may be justly proud. A wise fellow, he, this orchard denizen, now fat and heavy, thoroughly stocked up for his long sleep under the frozen sods. A creature of age-long sagacity, not impressed with modern methods.

With pleasant recollections of seeing him before, I scrambled over the slippery wall, there to find in the midst of yellow ferns the thick club of the Jack-in-the-Pulpit, now studded with bright red berries. Then across the birch woods I continued to the lane, where under low yellow branches I paused to survey my favorite briar patch, the ten entanglements of which I have broken through on many a May morning to locate a singing bluewing or chestnut-sided warbler. Now, not to my entire satisfaction, a smooth cultivated plot under which lie tucked hundreds of daffodil bulbs, while beyond yet freshly green, a long stretch of overbearing strawberry plants. My pet piece of bird terrain completely reclaimed by an ambitious New York secretary who, when she retires to her family homestead, is planning a business of bulbs and berries.

But my immediate disappointment was definitely challenged by the sharp "cherwink" of the towhee that still lingering in his favorite bushy corner of the adjoining meadow, seemed to query, "If I'm not disturbed by Miss Lucy's adventure in horticulture at the expense of the blackberry brambles, why should you be concerned?"

A question so pertinent that I quickly move on toward the deep swamp, flaming reds and golds in the wildest abandon. A symphony of autumn colors edged by a starry mass of purple, white and lavender asters from which whirred up a female pheasant. A bird strong in wing, but not to be compared in flight with the great hawk that almost at the same moment, flapped out from the tallest hickory and took to the air with majestic sweep. Sailing the blue, he dipped and wheeled, while I, earth-bound, stood on the wide stone that bridged the swamp's small stream and wished at least for seven league boots to stride the beckoning bogs. Cattails, fall-faded steeplebush, milkweed flying its silvery floss, goldenrod lifting plumes, prickly cockles—all flaunting their harvest of waiting seeds. A harvest glorified by the jeweled black alder, its red berries gleaming among the pale yellow leaves.

* * * *

In the birches, a flock of robins, planning, I was sure, an early morning start. Under the hickories, a pungent dry smell, as I stepped on the crisp brown leaves. And lining the tumbled stone wall, luxurious bushes bearing dark purplish-blue berries.

Now for my gentians, I thought, as I neared the lush wet grass where there was wont to grow those flowers of "heavenly hue." A verdant pocket bright with red clovers, asters and yarrow, but though I sought them diligently, not even one fringed gentian.

And yet I felt my quest was not in vain, for as I retraced my steps along the wall, under the hickories, across the bridge, through the lane, over the fence and up the hill, I knew that I had heard autumn's mellowed music.

The New 'Liberalism.'

The fine old word "liberal," with a small "l," has been pushed into the background, and sometimes thrown out of the window, by the Liberal with a capital "L." To be liberal with a small "l" meant to strive for progress through free thought, free press, free Government, tolerance, humaneness, moderation. The liberal mind was the open mind and the liberal temper was the middle-of-the-road temper. No doubt the liberal spirit had its blind spots and its dark spots, its inconsistencies, its hypocrisies. Yet in its very contradictions the liberal temper was a human thing. But the comprehensive label of the new Liberalism covers men from the radical camps, and they have brought with them their doctrinaire rigidities and their hard-boiled tactics. Formula and expediency tend to become a substitute for the generous human impulses and the "immediate" moral indignations of the old liberal temper.

Fair Enough

A Bower In The Suburbs.

AMONG THE many problems involved in the task of providing decent homes for people who live in urban and rural slums is one which up to now has received no mention at all, but which, nevertheless, comes early in the experience of anyone who has ever undertaken to build himself a bower in the suburbs, with roses around the door.

PEGLER.

That is the melancholy state to which the art of house building has declined under cover of pretty shutters, fake antiquity and dogged quaintness, all designed to catch the eye and divert attention from sprung seams, mislaid plumbing, carelessness, incompetence and miscalculation on the part of those who do the building.

In touching on this subject once before I brought down the wrath of many architects, contractors, dealers in building materials and skilled trades implicated in the misfortunes of the bag-holding private owner, but the situation is one that deserves consideration in any national housing plan.

• • • •

ARCHITECTS reported that the owner is most to blame for his own expensive disappointments, because he sees a picture in color on the cover of a magazine and wants a house just like that on a 50-foot lot, complete with chromium and mock-leather bar in the cellar, a Hollywood swimming pool in the garden and a room where he and his guests may shoot pool, all for $10,000, of which only $1,500 is to be cash.

The contractor sang a hymn of hate with a few specialized verses about the changeable mind of woman which wants to convert the laundry into a breakfast nook with built-in Dutch furniture and the living room into a cedar closet just about the time he is ready to pack up and call it a done job, and all for the original price.

The dealers said they preferred to sell first-class materials, but often were compelled to deliver trash against their own earnest advice because the owner wanted appearance above all else and an illusion, not a house. The carpenters, plumbers, electricians, masons, tinners and all insisted that they worked only to orders and couldn't make good houses out of bad material, and in the end, to hear them tell it, the baffled bourgeois, sitting under an umbrella in his parlor on the night of the first rain, was an uncommonly low scoundrel whose troubles served him bloody well right.

There may be a suspicion of truth in these matters, but the fact remains that in the life of many sad Americans there has been no experience more trying to man's faith in his fellow man than that of building a house. It is their contention, supported by legal contracts and canceled bills, that a house is not really built until it has been built over at least once, at the owner's expense.

• • • •

IF THE ARCHITECT draws a dream and the contractor undertakes to materialize it for an agreed price there are certain fundamentals accepted by both parties to the deal which are simple enough. The pipes should give water and the roof should not, the plaster and paint should stick but the doors should not, the furnace should not blow up nor the smoke blow down, and the foundation should be made of good cement, not maple sirup.

The Government's own experience in house building has been mixed. The Herald Tribune, always there with helpful criticism, disclosed a few years ago that in one project foundations and houses touched at only a few points. On the Florida Keys, however, houses built with Federal assistance according to a sensible, though remarkably hideous plan, are intended to resist the worst hurricane that ever can come to blow. They seem stout enough for that, but the test is yet to come.

But in Passamaquoddy Village, at Eastport, Me., the Army engineers built a Christmas card settlement of houses for the white collar help employed on the dam project at a cost of about $2,000 each, with the frank proviso that they would not last beyond five years.

But if it costs $2,000 to build a cottage on cheap land, by mass production, to last only five years, the big national project will be starting over again before it has been finished the first time.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Dexter Fellows.

New wonders meet his mellow, twinkling eyes,
His face with boyhood rapture is aglow;

Such music as he never heard before—
Pageants beyond his vivid, lively mind—
Movement and color, laughter and the roar—

More joys and glamour than he ever knew—
Gay caravans that roll through day and night—
Huge tented cities 'neath a vault of blue—
For such as he these never must take flight.

Bill Cody, Pawnee Bill and old "P. T." . . .
Again the Oakleys and the Bakers ride
And greet him in a whooping ecstasy.

The owners and the great performers wait—
The dainty Leitzel, greatest of the great,
Comes dancing through and whispers, "Welcome, Dex!"

The "big top's" noted stars of bygone days,
Whose praises he sang in the long ago,
Are there, no longer vague as in a haze . . .
They stand just as he knew them, row on row.

He fumbles in his pocket for a pen
(Or where such things as pockets ought to be)
And wonders as a voice says, "Not again
Need you paint all the glories that you see."

But habit is not easy to dismiss,
And, disappointed, we can hear him say,
"They don't know—all the boys, about all this . . .

L'Envoi.

God rest you, Dexter, harbinger of joys,
As down new trails, briefcase in hand, you swing!
But how shall city-room men—and the boys—

Brazil's Change

Vargas' New Constitution No Fascist Move But A Frank Recognition Of Reality, Says Observer Agreeing With Masses.

By Peter Thicket,
Special Correspondence of The Post.
Montevideo, Uruguay.

IF THERE WERE a Nobel prize for the outstanding political strategist of the year it would certainly go to President Getulio Vargas of Brazil. With a deft twist of his wrist he yanked all the foundations from under 42,000,000 people and while they were still blinking he slipped in new ones. He had gone about his usual business on the morning of the 10th of November and was at it again on the 11th. A slight shiver ran through the population of Brazil, but developed neither into a fever nor into a cold.

All but those whose political hopes were shattered to smithereens have accepted the situation, not stoically and resignedly, but gladly and with deep sighs of relief. This means that Vargas either knew better than anyone else the exact temper of his people or that he was miraculously lucky in slipping over something which happened to be in accord with the needs and desires of his compatriots. But it is hard to believe that luck was so important. For years and with a clock-like regularity which leaves the observer dumfounded because the technique works just as regularly this wizard of the political strings has played upon a whole scene which is larger than the United States. He has found all the lost chords ever sung about and the song of that name might as well go into retirement.

Vargas Explains 'Brazil Has Merely Gone Brazilian.'

PRESIDENT VARGAS has woven vagueness into a mighty political arm and has all Brazil and most of the world guessing as to what it all means. "Has Brazil gone Fascist?" is a question on all lips. Vargas answers that Brazil has gone Brazilian and that the new regime is democratic and anti-Communist.

He scattered about, just before the coup d'etat, however, enough definite, positive and concrete changes in economic policy to make all those who might probe too deeply into the incompleteness of his answer tolerant with respect to those gaps and so satisfied with the new commercial possibilities as to be indifferent as to the new political cloak under which they now appear. His enemies of a few weeks ago, the coffee growers, now back him to the hilt, and many of those who yesterday were preaching democracy now claim that Brazil was not ready for it and that Vargas has saved the nation from disintegration, foreign foes and civil war.

A reader in the United States may ask, too, whether this was just another Latin-American revolution. In the first place, Brazil has not had many revolutions. In fact, only one successful one, that of 1930, which first brought Vargas into power. In the second place, it is different in many other respects. It was bloodless and in accord with Brazilian traditions, which has made its major changes without resort to arms. And if one accepts the President's own explanation of the whole business, as many thinking Brazilians do, it came in response to a real need and offers many realistic solutions for real problems and may possibly become a turning point in the political, social and economic evolution of Brazil.

It was a personalist revolution against personalism, unbridled regionalisms, legislative impotence and extravagance but primarily against a magna charta and a body of laws which did not fit the scene, the people or the time. The new constitution is the most realistic in Brazilian history and one of the most realistic in all Latin America, i. e., realistic in the sense that it deals with real needs. Whether the solutions are just as realistic remains to be seen.

Coup Said To Have Made Slight Changes At Rio.

IN ONE SENSE, then, the coup d'etat of November 10 does not alter anything at all. There always have been in Brazil and in most Latin-American nations a dichotomy of institutions—a written constitution and an unwritten one, a written newspaper and an unwritten one, a written law and unwritten one, and rarely did the twain meet. Part of this was due to the fact that the written laws were almost always imitations of models borrowed from abroad, poorly adapted to local needs and widely at variance with local psychology and habits.

Most Latin-American executives have, in the last analysis, appointed a personal candidate to succeed themselves. This was unconstitutional, undemocratic and always raised a hue and cry. But it was always done. By the new fundamental charter this becomes a constitutional privilege of the President and ends a farce in Brazilian life. Such attempts to reconcile law and reality seem to offer a clew as to whether Brazil has gone Fascist.

We say a clew because it is doubtful whether anyone actually knows the answer. All the suggestions seem to point, however, to a negative reply. Naturally, Brazil has not been blind or uninfluenced by the newer developments in political practice and theory in other parts of the world. There are many points of resemblance in the new document with that of Portugal and thus indirectly with those of Italy and Germany. But by and large the opinion of many that this is a revolution to make Brazil safe for the Brazilian seems to be valid and acceptable. In fact, groups which represented or reflected certain European ideologies are distinctly disappointed. They have not arrived as they expected. On the morning of November 10, Green Shirts were everywhere in evidence. At 2 o'clock they had vanished.

Fundamental changes have taken place, however, in some respects. Brazil is now a highly centralized republic whereas on November 9 it was a loose confederation of 21 states in what was called a Federal Republic. It is still called that. But the national government in Rio is now all-powerful and the national government is now the president of the republic, and the President of the republic is Getulio Vargas. He rules and reigns. There are no checks to his power and his decree-laws move the whole machine.

He thus is a dictator with these differences: Provisions are made for his succession. He has a program and a constitution which, unlike those of Latin-American dictators usually, is relatively free from humbug promises and hypocritically pious references to a democracy in which he does not believe and seem to fit the moment and promise to be an interlude in a period of transition toward democracy and not toward fascism nor communism. But all hinges, of course, now on one person and that person is already a legendary figure in Brazilian history. Who is Getulio Vargas? No one knows. He managed this coup so deftly and got away with it so easily that one wonders whether he will not be tempted to go the whole way and proclaim himself President for life.

No Change Contemplated In Brazil's Foreign Policy.

IT IS CLAIMED that there will be no change in the foreign policy of Brazil and that the suspension of payments on the foreign debts of Brazil will be temporary. Brazil fundamentally altered its coffee policy a few days before the political coup d'etat. Sales abroad had decreased tremendously and an exchange which had been steadily improving suddenly began to toboggan. Whether this was due to a sudden release on the controls, for political purposes, or the result of conditions in world markets is a debatable question. In any event the payment of interest and amortization budgets with a very unfavorable exchange and with a virtually nonexistent sale of coffee became increasingly difficult.

In the President's radio speech on the night of the coup d'etat in which he preached a new nationalism he stated that he was not against foreign capital because Brazil needed it. Shortly afterward he saw the inconsistency in a program of canceling payments which would harm Brazilian credit and the importation of foreign funds. He then announced that the new program was temporary. But it is an open question as to whether this measure was necessary. London reports on the financial condition of Brazil have been generally favorable. Nevertheless, President Vargas has gone out of his way to mention the United States and Brazil's relations to Uncle Sam in many interviews since the coup. And it is believed that Brazil will seek to retain the friendship of her best customer.

Almost everyone is agreed that something had to be done. The partisans of the two presidential candidates believed that the accession of their man would "save the nation" and that salvation was necessary. We refer not to the usual salvation of all presidential campaigns, but to the specific needs of Brazil at this moment in her evolution. But the very ardor of the candidates and their supporters seems to have precipitated a situation which made a bad matter worse and which called for drastic action.

For Lawyers

By Joseph E. Gellermann.

Prof. Kuhn's Commentaries.

NEARLY EVERY LAWYER remembers with terror that thorny subject of his senior law course called "conflict of laws." It deals with legal situations wherein litigants or the objects of litigation are in two or more jurisdictions.

Under the American form of Government there are, as everyone knows, 48 State jurisdictions and a Federal jurisdiction. Each system jealously guards its own and, needless to say, conflicts among them arise. These are ultimately adjusted under a set of rules and precedents known as "conflict of laws."

The same thing holds true for legal situations arising among sovereign nations.

PROF. ARTHUR A. KUHN, formerly of Columbia University Law School and of the Hague Academy of International Law, has condensed his many years of study and practice as an international lawyer into a text book of comparative commentaries on international conflicts of law. The author states that "in adopting the comparative method we have followed the example of the great master, Story, a century ago, with this difference: that where Story referred principally to the writings of foreign commentators, we have based the comparative comments also upon specific foreign legislation and the decisions of the foreign courts."

The task was further complicated by the fact that the author of this work had to compare two fundamentally different systems of legal thought, the world of the civil law with that of the common law, and this fact alone is one of the principal reasons why this text book has practically no predecessor.

• • • •

THE BOOK is divided under such headings as jurisdiction and procedure, persons and the status of marriage, property, contracts, torts and wills. The encyclopedic nature of the work renders detailed discussion impossible.

The reader is introduced to the subject in a historical chapter, somewhat in the style of Durant's "History of Philosophy." There are 22 pages of high-light sketches of great jurists and periods of legal thought. The following chapter deals with jurisdiction and procedure and is one of the most brilliantly organized sections of the book. It is supported by interesting cases and careful legal citations. Above all it is up to date. The author appraises the influence of "public policy" on recognition by the courts of foreign judgments, giving examples where French courts have even gone beyond it.

FOR INSTANCE: "A divorce was sought to be rendered executory in France on the application of a French woman who had been divorced by her German husband in Germany where the parties were domiciled. The divorce was granted by reason of alleged remarks insulting to the husband's feelings of patriotism toward Germany and replies called forth on the part of the husband similarly insulting to the wife as a person of French origin.

"These remarks, consistent with other circumstances, were accepted by the German court. The French court decided that it was against French public policy to recognize the allegations as grounds for divorce and refused exequatur.

"The result is curiously paradoxical because the sentiments of French patriotism or loyalty on the part of the wife were the very cause of her not being able to remarry again in the country of her origin."

• • • •

THE CHAPTER on persons and the status of marriage is of particular interest to the practicing attorney. For instance, Prof. Kuhn cites the case of a British woman domiciled in Scotland, who had entered into a marriage in Paris with an Austrian subject. The pair became domiciled at Wiesbaden, Germany.

When the World War broke out the woman removed to Switzerland. The administrator of Austrian property claimed her property in Scotland as the property of an alien enemy, the marriage having made her an Austrian national.

The woman, however, relied on a decree of nullity of the marriage pronounced by the court of Wiesbaden. The House of Lords decided in her favor, ruling that the domiciliary court had jurisdiction to annul a marriage performed elsewhere.

• • • •

THE LEGAL PROFESSION is greatly indebted to Prof. Kuhn for this clear, analytical and well-documented work on private international law. It is undoubtedly the best and one of the first textbooks of this nature ever written in the United States. It deserves a place on the legal book shelf of every lawyer.

What A Voyage!

MAJOR SETH WIARD, of the Institute of Criminal Science on K street, is a ballistics expert. In the mystery stories a ballistics expert is the man who takes a look at the bullet and tells how tall the murderer was. In real life it doesn't happen quite like that, but when it comes to deductions through the science of ballistics there are few if any that can top Maj. Wiard.

McCARTHY.

However, it's not in relation to ballistics that he comes into this column. His contribution comes under the "now-it-can-be-told" heading. Maj. Wiard has gained almost as much fame around town through his inimitable tale of the cruise of the U. S. S. Bothwell as he has through his accomplishments as an expert in his field.

Even if it weren't an historic voyage for the Coast Guard, the cruise of the U. S. S. Bothwell should be recorded for posterity.

"It was an experimental voyage," Maj. Wiard said, "and experimental was the word. It began in January of 1920 and lasted till July.

"The Coast Guard wanted to test the feasibility of using what were called "Eagle" boats. And we were the conductors of the experiment.

"The U. S. S. Bothwell was one of three Eagle boats turned over to the Coast Guard. We nearly turned ouss over, and I believe the other two turned over by themselves.

"They could float in six feet of water, and yet they carried 10 tons of gun on deck. As a result they would rock in still water. But they had other properties as well. They were better equipped for sound than Carnegie Hall.

"The wind in the smoke stacks would set the whole ship vibrating like a violin string. And if the cook dropped a pan in the galley the noise would wake everyone in the ship. A pair of pliers dropped on the metal deck made the men below think they were under bombardment. In short, the U. S. S. Bothwell was 200 feet of tin can.

• • • •

"WELL," SAID MAJ. WIARD, "we should have known that a voyage in such a ship was doomed to failure. But we couldn't have foreseen all that happened to us.

"I won't go into the fact that we ran aground at almost every port we entered. I won't bother to go into detail of how we were always running out of oil at the crucial moment, and having to be towed to port. I'll just hit the high spots.

"We left New London, Conn., in January. We were on our way to Frisco, by way of the Panama Canal. And things began to pop before we were really under way.

"We had two lifeboats for our undermanned and overworked crew. One was a 16-foot dorry . . . but the engine wouldn't work. The larger one would have been all right . . . but the seams were open.

"Now the normal way to fix that is to drop the boat overside and let the salt water get in the work of closing up the seams. Somebody got the bright idea of pumping sea water into the boat through a fire hose. When we got it well filled up, we waited for the seams to close . . . and the bottom fell out.

"But it wasn't until we reached San Salvador that we ran into the perfect example of what was normal on the Bothwell. We prepared to meet a San Salvadorian dignitary. We gave him a five-gun salute as he came along side in a little boat.

"In the bow of the dignitary's boat was a red-headed Irishman, who was going to act as interpreter. It turned out that he was drunk. And just after the salute the redhead made a grab for the ladder of our boat . . . and missed. When we'd fished him out we prepared to receive the dignitary.

• • • •

"THE DIGNITARY, a gentleman of dusky hue, strode aboard. He wore a full dress coat with epaulets, a tri-cornered hat, marine pants, a dagger, a sword—and the only unadorned parts of his body were his bare feet.

"The dignitary went below with the captain, but pretty soon the red-headed Irishman was back, laughing fit to kill."

Maj. Wiard said that he asked the Irishman if the dignitary owned half the island and if so, just who he was.

"The Irishman," Maj. Wiard said, "stopped laughing just long enough to tell us that our dignitary was . . ." a second lieutenant in the San Salvadorian infantry.

Maj. Wiard skips over briefly such incidents as how the U. S. S. Bothwell ran out of tobacco. He gives only passing mention to the time they traded white shirts to the natives of the West Indies for chicken—and got sea gulls. He mentions the turtle obtained from the natives for the crew's dinner only long enough to say that "even the broth was tough."

The big trouble was with the crew. Maj. Wiard, in recalling the incidents, doesn't place much emphasis on such matters as the fine radio equipment they had—and nobody to run it after one radio man became ill and the other was demoted. As Maj. Wiard says, we could at least "shoot crap in the radio room."

But the crew was in a class by itself, according to Maj. Wiard. Before they'd got to Panama the punishment list was as long as the bill for taxi fare to South America.

"Yes, the crew was the real trouble," Maj. Wiard said. "The captain sent me down to see what was wrong with our big gun. The crew had locked it so it couldn't be aimed. It had become a stationary gun overnight.

"The captain asked me what we could do," Maj. Wiard said, "and the best suggestion that I could make was that, instead of aiming the gun, we point the ship.

• • • •

"THE CRASHING blow of the trip came as we reached San Francisco. There the chief engineer decided to familiarize himself with the motor, so he tore it down to look it over.

"The crew, being good natured souls, took the opportunity to steal the 'indicator,' without which it was impossible to make any sort of a voyage. And the ship was held up for three weeks until a new 'indicator' was obtained. The crew had thrown the original one overboard."

It was at that time that Maj. Wiard left the good ship U. S. S. Bothwell, and so he isn't familiar with much of its journeying after that. But I did ask him where it is now.

"Oh, yes," Maj. Wiard said, "it's in Alaska now."

"In service?"

Roosevelt Better; Party Sees Island Jail of Dr. Mudd

Miami, Fla., Nov. 30 (AP).—President Roosevelt and his guests aboard the U. S. S. Potomac turned back time today and visited Dry Tortuga Island, America's first Alcatraz, near Key West.

A message to temporary White House headquarters here said the yacht anchored off the island at breakfast time.

It added the President, who had an abscessed tooth extracted November 18, in Washington, still was feeling effects of the infection, "but showing satisfactory improvement." The tooth pocket was draining when the President left Washington.

Some members of the President's party went ashore on Dry Tortugas and inspected old Fort Jefferson, where Dr. Samuel Mudd was incarcerated for nearly ten years before he was pardoned. He had been charged with conspiracy in assassination of President Lincoln after setting the broken leg of John Wilkes Booth, the assassin.

The radio message said Col. Edwin M. Watson, senior military aide to the President, "found to his dismay" the fort now is under supervision of Secretary Ickes, another member of the party.

Senators Score Plan to Reduce U.S. Road Fund

Cartwright in House Also Assails Roosevelt's Economy Proposal.

By the Associated Press.

Members of Congress found fault yesterday with the newest item in President Roosevelt's program for helping business—reduction of Federal expenditures for highways.

Hardly had he asked a deep cut in these expenditures than Senators Hayden and Ashurst, Arizona Democrats, announced their opposition, and Chairman Cartwright (Democrat), Oklahoma, of the House Roads Committee issued a sharply critical statement.

In a special message to Congress yesterday on road-building expenditures, Mr. Roosevelt objected "strenuously" to the practice of incurring advance obligations for this purpose without reference to the condition of the budget.

The practice has been to make "authorizations" from one to two years ahead for Federal assistance to the States in building secondary roads. At the beginning of each year the sum authorized has been apportioned among the States by the Secretary of Agriculture, to be followed by actual appropriations.

By the act of June 16, 1936, the Congress authorized appropriations totaling $216,500,000, for each of the fiscal years 1938 and 1939, for Federal-aid highways, secondary or feeder roads, elimination of grade crossings, forest highways, roads and trails, and highways across public lands, to be administered by the Department of Agriculture. This act also authorized appropriations totaling $21,500,000, for each of the fiscal years 1938 and 1939, for roads and trails within national parks, for parkways to give access to national parks and form connecting sections of a national parkway plan, and for Indian reservation roads, to be administered by the Department of the Interior. Under the first category there has been appropriated to date on account of the authorizations for the fiscal year 1938 a total of $24,500,000, and under the second category a total of $13,500,000, or a grand total of $38,000,000, leaving $200,000,000 still to be appropriated for that fiscal year. To meet obligations under this $200,000,000 of outstanding authorizations, I propose to include an estimate of appropriations of approximately $100,000,000 in the budget for the fiscal year of 1939, with the balance to be provided for 1940. This takes care of the authorizations for the fiscal year 1938 and leaves for consideration the authorizations of $238,000,000 for the fiscal year 1939.

In view of the large amounts which have been contributed by the Federal Government, particularly during the past five years, for the construction of public roads, and because of the necessity for taking definite steps to reduce expenditures for the purpose of securing a balanced budget, I recommend that the Congress adopt the following policies:

1. Provide for the cancellation of the 1939 authorizations prior to January 1, 1938, by which date the Secretary of Agriculture is required to apportion to the various States $214,000,000 of such authorizations.

2. Limit to not more than $125,000,000 per annum all public roads authorizations for the fiscal year 1940 and for each of the next few succeeding years.

Since the enactment of the first Federal-aid highway act in 1916, there has been appropriated for public highways, including allotments from emergency appropriations, more than $3,100,000,000, of which amount $1,490,000,000 has been made available during the last five years. This annual average for the past five years of $298,000,000 contrasts with an annual average of less than $100,000,000 for the five-year period preceding the depression.

There is another provision of the existing law relating to public roads which should receive consideration in this connection. The Secretary of Agriculture is required to apportion to the States the annual amount authorized for appropriation, and to approve projects of proposed States expenditures thereunder which shall constitute contractural obligations of the Federal Government regardless of the availability of appropiations for their payment and of the fiscal outlook of the Treasury. This mandatory provision completely ties the hands of the Executive as to the amount of road funds to be included in the budget for any fiscal year. While I do not object to the apportionment among the States of such amounts as may be authorized for appropriation, I do most strenuously object to the mandatory incurrence of obligations by the Federal Government under such apportionments without regard to its ability to finance them from its revenues. I, therefore, recommend that the Congress take the necessary action permanently to eliminate this provision of our public roads law.

3 Buses Shot at As Both Sides Refuse Terms

Bullets Break Windows in Pennsylvania as Strike Continues.

Renewed outbreaks of violence marked the Greyhound Bus Co.'s double announcement yesterday refusing to agree to a closed shop or basic wage increase and setting a deadline of noon today for striking drivers to return to work.

Shortly after the company had informed drivers that they would be considered as "having resigned," if they failed to report for work before the deadline, the Associated Press reported that three buses had been shot at in nearby Pennsylvania mountains.

According to the report, L. T. Shreve, a Greyhound bus dispatcher, said two of the buses had been struck by bullets, but no one injured.

Shreve said two bullets broke a window near the driver's seat in one of the buses near Cashtown, Pa., and another bus was struck in the body of the vehicle as it neared Zora, between Waynesboro and Gettysburg.

Possibilities of an early settlement of the strike faded as spokesmen for the strikers declared they would not consider the Greyhound proposal and company officials continued to remain firm in their stand against a closed shop or basic pay increases.

John L. Conner, Federal labor conciliator, continued his peace efforts in Cleveland betwe company and union officials, but no marked progress toward settlement of the week-old strike was reported.

A grand jury here today will consider the cases of 11 men accused of beating William F. Dixon, a driver, Friday afternoon. Dixon was pulled from his bus and attacked on New York avenue northeast.

Battle Predicted On Postmaster Jobs

the Ramspeck measure passed by the House.

Both Ramspeck and O'Mahoney proposed that first, second and third class postmasters be placed in the merit system, and be appointed without term or confirmation by the Senate.

Yesterday O'Mahoney, in committee, offered to compromise by agreeing to Senate confirmation, but insisting on appointment without term instead of for the customary four-year patronage periods which McKellar's bill would restore.

The committee made one important change in the McKellar bill upon the motion of Senator Hayden (Democrat), of Arizona. Apparently offered as a sop to the Civil Service reform group, the amendment incorporated the provisions of an executive order in the bill. The order issued first on a general scale by President Wilson, places fourth-class postmasters in the merit system.

"This action was a confession of the validity of the arguments of those of us who are waging a fight for civil service for all postmasters," Senator O'Mahoney said.

"The only reason fourth-class postmasterships are not sought by patronage hunters is that the salaries are so small and the work so necessary that everyone recognizes that the organization must be efficiently operated."

Backed By La Follette.

Senator O'Mahoney said his minority report would be signed by Senators La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Logan, both of whom supported him in voting against the McKellar bill. Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, also voted with the minority on the last ballot.

O'Mahoney's amendment, which would have been substituted for the McKellar amendment to Section 6 of the act of July 12, 1876, is as follows:

"Postmasters of first, second, third and fourth classes shall hereafter be appointed without term in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled 'An act to regulate and improve the civil service of the United States,' approved January 16, 1883: provided, that in the cases of postmasters of the first, second and third classes, the appointment shall be made by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate: provided further, that in the case of postoffices of the fourth class, postmasters shall be appointed by the Postmaster General, by whom all appointments and removals shall be notified to the General Accounting Office."

Couple Trailed To Miami Fail In Suicide Pact

Mrs. Reeves and King Fight for Lives After Auto Fumes Give Out.

After being found unconscious in a parked automobile into which gasoline fumes had been piped from the car's exhaust tank, Mrs. Marguerite M. Reeves, wife of P. W. Reeves, of Washington, and Edward A. King, of Baltimore, were fighting for their lives last night in a Miami (Fla.) hospital, the Associated Press reported.

"If this act constitutes a sin, may God forgive us," a penciled note found in Mrs. Reeve's handbag read. The note also asked that their bodies be cremated and buried together "in some quiet spot," and said they had been "unfairly treated."

Mrs. Reeves' condition was regarded as highly critical. Hope was held out for King's recovery. The police said that only the fact that the automobile's engine stopped when the gasoline supply was exhausted prevented both from being dead when found.

King, who has a wife and three children in Baltimore, was to have appeared in Tallahassee, Fla., for an extradition hearing today. His wife charged him with desertion and nonsupport after he had been discovered November 26 in Miami with Mrs. Reeves. The search for the couple had been under way for a month.

Reeves, who is secretary to former Representative Ralph Eltse (Republican), of California, and once a member of the staff of Paul V. McNutt, High Commissioner to the Philippines, has sued for divorce, naming King as corespondent. Reeves returned to this country in September from Manila. He narrowly escaped death when the S. S. President Hoover, on which he was a passenger, was bombed off the Chinese coast.

Mr. and Mrs. Reeves frequently entertained at their former Chevy Chase home, and numbered many prominent political figures, including Gov. Harry W. Nice, of Maryland, among their friends.

King, who is 40, is of Russian-English parentage and now has pending an application for American citizenship. He was married shortly after the war to Mrs. Viola Ruby. They made their home at 163 Monastery avenue, Baltimore.

Yuletide Shopping Is Started Earlier

People are doing their Christmas shopping earlier and earlier every year, according to the Merchants and Manufacturers Association. Shoppers' desire to avoid the Christmas Eve rush has forced local stores to put their full holiday lines on sale sooner than ever this year.

Another effect of the early shopping movement, Secretary Edward D. Shaw of the association said yesterday, has been to encourage banks to speed up distribution of Christmas Club funds.

This week 82,858 Washingtonians will receive $7,343,050 in Christmas Club funds. This is an increase of 25,000 members and about $2,750,000 over 1934 club membership.

The Madrillon Is Popular With Spanish Folk

Cuisine and Music Seem to Draw Throngs; Other Nightclub News.

By Chanticleer

Peter Borras has an attraction for the Spanish residents and visitors to Washington . . . or is it Senor Borras' excellent cuisine . . . or Johnny Shaw's music. Anyway, the Madrillon continues to be the No. 1 gathering point for both the ladies and gentlemen of Spanish extraction and from our Latin neighbors to the south.

One night last week at the Madrillon a stunning olive-skinned beauty sat soberly as Johnny Shaw and his men did one rumba and tango after another. Only her lips moved—silently, as she formed the words to the tunes. She, it developed, is a daughter of one of our Central American neighbors and loves to dream idly of home as the music frames familiar scenes.

Concern Plans 200 New Homes At Greenbelt

FHA Loan Reported Virtually Completed for Deal.

Complying with President Roosevelt's theory of large-scale housing by private industry as a solution to sharply rising costs of construction, Greenbelt, the Government's model community, announced yesterday the near completion of negotiations for erection of 200 prefabricated houses by a private concern.

General Homes, Inc., a private construction firm of Chicago, Ill., has virtually completed negotiations with the Federal Housing Administration for a loan on the project and final plans were being made yesterday with the Farm Security Administration for erection of the first group of ten houses.

Heretofore the suburban housing project has been carried on completely by the Government which has built 885 homes and community facilities for a town of 3,000 homes. Officials hope that private enterprise will erect the remaining 2,015 home units.

Officials of the Farm Security Administration yesterday explained that the land will be rented to the private concern on a long term lease and houses probably will be rented to tenants instead of sell- the homes outright.

Rental rates will be limifed, they said, and it is hoped that the land rental will help liquidate the Government's overhead investment in the community.

Meeting in their chambers at Greenbelt, the town council Monday night elected Louis Bessemer, editor of the community weekly paper, mayor by a three to two vote, and elected H. H. Maurer, mayor pro tem to act in Bessemer's absence, Maurer is a mechanic employed by the American Airlines, Inc., and Bessemer is a clerk in the Department of Public Health Service.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Consistently Snubbed by Husband's Senior Partner and Wife, Bewildered Bride Asks What to Do.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Please tell me what is wrong. My husband is in partnership with his best and lifelong friend, to whom he is deeply attached. This feeling is reciprocated. For some reason unknown to me this man has never liked me and shows it in many little ways. I came here a bride and a total stranger to everyone. I am 12 years younger than my husband, considered very attractive, stylish, friendly and vivacious. I love my husband to the exclusion of every other love and we have grand times together.

• • • •

My husband's partner is six years his senior, fine looking, clever and very popular. His wife is older than he, very plain, unattractive in every detail, with a sharp temper. I have tried my best to establish a friendship between us for my husband's sake, but she has coolly ignored my every advance. Her usual expression when looking at me is one of amused contempt. We do not visit.

• • • •

They have a great deal more money than we, a very handsome home, servants and two large cars. Our home is small but very attractive, one car, one maid. We both dress well and entertain quite a bit. Now, Miss Haworth, from the very first, if I chance to meet my husband's partner on the street, either he looks hurriedly the other way, avoiding my glance; or, if it happens he is taken unaware, then he takes off his hat, sweeps it almost to the pavement and stares me in the face without speaking.

• • • •

I have been told that he has intimated to his wife that he doubts my faithfulness to my husband. Nothing could be more untrue. It strikes me with horror to have been told this and I find myself hating the man and his wife, too. He knows that my husband loves me dearly, wants me always to go with him on trips, and lavishes too much of his worldly goods on me. Our home is ideal. Why should this man treat me as he does? Shall I speak to my husband about it? Or should I just ignore the whole thing? It makes me furious the way he behaves toward me. I have decided not to bother about his wife. I feel she detests me.

ROSEMARY.

Wrong Social Approach.

DEAR ROSEMARY: There is that about your fond description of yourself; about your disparaging estimate of your husband's business associate and his wife, which leads me to believe your approach to friendship with them was as unintelligent as it has been fruitless. I can imagine that you impress them as being a cross between a village belle and baby vamp, who confidently expects her girlish physical charm, "stylish" appearance and gushing vivacity of manner to carry all before it. I am reminded of the remark made by a cultivated man of world affairs about a junior associate—a quiet, dignified, able younger man—whose chances of advancement he summed up in these words: "A nice fellow—but greatly handicapped by that silly little wife of his."

• • • •

Your essential mistake, no doubt, was in naively supposing that that particular brand of spellbinding which won your husband's heart would also win the hearts of his senior partner and the latter's wife. You probably treated them to a pyrotechnic display of coyness, coquetry and gushing vivacity instead of conducting yourself with a poised, impersonal reserve of manner. You probably assumed (unconsciously spoiled by your husband's eager adoration; his complete and indulgent approval of all you are and do) that you were the heroine of every meeting with them, that the center of the stage was yours; that the husband was to be won by sex appeal and his wife by inordinate flattery. It may have been the suggestion of what one might call the boudoir approach; at least, the courting approach, to the senior partner, which caused him to suspect you of being capable of infidelity, and which resulted in his wife's attitude of amused contempt and his very evident desire to avoid any twosome encounter with you.

• • • •

Combine such unfortunate social manner with failure to stand, very definitely, on invitation in the matter of making new friends in a strange environment, and you have the full reason why this man and his wife have turned thumbs down on you. You have said: "I came here a bride and total stranger to everyone . . . I have tried my best to establish friendship between us for my husband's sake, but she has coolly ignored my every advance." The well-bred newcomer to any situation instinctively relegates himself to the lowest and most inconspicuous place, figuratively speaking, and remains there until he has passed inspection and is cordially summoned to the higher places and inner circles. The newcomer who barges in with the unmistakable intention of making friends with all the "right" people, for obviously self-advantageous reasons, almost invariably gets thoroughly snubbed by the very persons he hopes to win.

• • • •

Your repeated, unsolicited, coldly discouraged "advances" toward friendship with this older woman of established position in the community revealed your ignorance of appropriate social behavior. Judging you in the light of your innocently mistaken efforts to be useful to your husband, this woman probably finds you tiresome, shallow, conceited, socially pushing, neither the sort of younger woman she could be interested in, nor one whom she could present with pride to her friends.

• • • •

The situation can only be corrected by realizing your mistakes and profiting by them. I daresay your public manners need complete revising. In order to keep your chin up in the face of this couple's disapproval, it's possible you've been making a public display of your husband's love for you, and yours for him—the ideal home life, his lavish generosity, his desire to have you always at his side. Any display of married emotion is always obnoxious to the beholder, particularly the newly married variety. Again, it's something the well-bred person just doesn't do.

• • • •

I suggest you cut out altogether the public billing and cooing with your husband; the confident coquetting with other men; the gushing vivacity and fulsome flattery with all and sundry, the issuance of invitations on the slightest provocation or none at all, and go in for cultivation of a well-stocked, inquiring, attentive mind and a poised, serene, impersonal manner to bring to your social contacts.

• • • •

Develop a genuine, self-respecting indifference to the opinion and attitude of this particular couple, as well as to that of any other persons you meet in this new environment with whom you do not find yourself in spontaneous rapport. If you meet the man on the street and catch his gaze, incline your head slightly say, "How do you do?" with a cool half-smile and pass on without the suggestion of a pause. Do the same with his wife. But don't go one step out of your way to attract the attenton of either. If, after a time, they evince a kindlier attitude, let bygones be bygones and meet them on a footing of mutual intellectual interests. Don't imply the anticipation of special recognition as your husband's wife. That isn't enough. You've got to be an acceptable person in your own right. It would be making a mountain out of a molehill to discuss the situation with your husband.

Cruise Costumes— A Prelude to Spring

Christmas Candy Recipes Sought In Post Contest

Do you find that Christmas is not complete unless there are plates of creamy fudge, crunchy peanut brittle, or even homemade taffy placed within easy reach? Of course, you do. And half the fun is in successfully making these "batches" of candy and flavoring them in different ways.

Recipes for these Christmas candies are the theme of the week's Favorite Recipe Contest. They challenge the skill of the amateur and try the experience of the semi-professional. Recipes must be of the foolproof variety, standardized through much testing. There are a multitude of Christmas candies. But doesn't the name of fruit fudge, cream mints, date rolls and toffee bring pleasant memories? Perhaps you have others to add to this list.

Your recipe for Christmas candy may win one of the five cash prizes offered this week in the contest. The first award is $3, the second, $2, and there are three cash prizes of $1.

To qualify in the contest, write out your recipe giving clear directions for preparation and mail to Jean Green, Post Food Editor, before December 4. Enter only one recipe and make sure that you have included on the page your name and address.

Cruise and Resort Styles Offer Preview of Fashions at Home

The Post Fashion Editor Sees Bright Prints on Dark Grounds, and Interesting Coats That Will Be Worn Here in Spring.

By Ethel Ehlen,

The Post Fashion Editor.

IF YOU CAN afford to be a sun worshiper and will hence follow summer weather to the Southland or cruise to a resort, you'll need a special wardrobe. If you have to stay at home and battle the blustery winds and frosty weather, you'll still be interested in resort clothes, because they are the forerunners of next spring's styles. The cruise shops in Washington stores now abound in gay and colorful resort clothes, from play versions and shipboard wear to those for formal evenings when dining and dancing under Southern moons.

A wonderful compromise for the "stay-at-homers" are the smart prints, which are suitable to wear now under dark winter coats. These are usually bright patterns on black grounds — large exotic flowers splashing dark grounds in a flashing yet wearable and chic fashion. Besides the intense colors, such as crimson, chartreuse and fuchsia, which aim to add color and life to the dark winter scene, there are numerous prints in the ever-effective black and white. Monotone prints in a new technique are extremely clever; the flower or geometric designs in self-color are applied in the manner of a brush stroke, giving a subtle appearance to the entire fabric.

Light Prints Subtle Also.

Strictly resort in their color and styling are the white and light-colored prints. These too have gone subtle and distinctive. High-fashion notes in this realm are the pinky versions of terra cotta, soft grap greens, bright deep blues, dull yellow golds, and elusive rose and brown tones. White on white, in the painted-effect described for the dark ground prints are also new in exclusive-looking resort and cruise prints. Many of the printed costumes flaunt their own jackets, either hip-length affairs fitted to the figure, or very brief boleros in self-material or dark bright colors for dramatic contrast. Fabrics range through the silks and rayons including crepons, hopsacking, thick and thin, crinkle crepes, matelasses and conventional silk crepes of smooth textures.

The cruise coat is of utmost importance, as it can be worn on shipboard now, and later on as a spring topcoat. Neutral colors in the beige range are considered best for traveling—the newest are trimmed with voluminous collars of fox, lynx and other long-haired furs. Tweeds feature monotones and natural mixtures; many are woven with cashmere or mohair for added softness and luxury. Plaids are very good for cruise and spring—the latest ideas are painter colors and horse blanket checks rather than the classic tartans of winter. In the dressier type of cruise travel coat, all blues are important, from navy through royal with a purplish cast. Off-shades which are neither pastel nor bright are in the realm of high woman whose budget allows the purchase of a number of coats.

Coat fabrics are as interesting as the wide color range. Smoother textures with a more substantial finish distinguish the cruise and spring coat materials. These include such wools and wool mixtures as: coverts, reps, worsteds, twills, bengaline, serge and the inevitable tweeds. The box coat which gained such unprecedented popularity this winter will return for spring as evidenced in the resort collections.

Gay Holiday Gloves.

Pull-on gloves perfectly tailored come in all colors. Gloves and matching scarf offer a smart combination to brighten the holiday costume. For the teas there are dusty pink swedes, new blues and mulberries. More tailored are cypress green gloves, or wheat with a design of chocolate brown on them. For the black costume, one shop features cafe au lait pull-ons.

Mushroom Filling.

Season browned mushrooms with minced onions and celery for a delicious filling for small pastry cases made of biscuit dough. Surround the cases with a white sauce to which hard-cooked egg slices and minced pimentos have been added.

COOKIES

½ cup of butter
1 cup of brown sugar
2 eggs
1-3 cup of cream
1½ teaspoons of cinnamon
2-3 teaspoon of cloves
½ teaspoon of nutmeg
¼ teaspoon of salt
1 cup of chopped dates
2 cups of flour
1 teaspoon of soda

Cream the butter. Add the sugar and cream until light and fluffy. Sift the flour with cinnamon, cloves, nutmeg, salt and soda. Add to the butter alternately with the cream. Add chopped dates and mix lightly. Break off into bits of soft dough and flatten down 3 inches apart on a greased cooky sheet. Bake ten minutes in a moderate oven.

In order to keep a child covered in cold weather sew elastic to the two upper corners of the blanket and fasten these to a strap fastened to the head of the bed instead of using the "pinning" method. The elastic gives, but the youngster keeps covered.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Nov. 30.

EDUCATORS may deem that junior's intelligence quotient is bound to be lowered for not having tin soldiers, toy guns, miniature tanks, battleships, war plane models and similar toys to play with. Nonetheless it looks likely that a number of stores throughout the country may follow the example of one of our leading Fifth avenue department stores, which has just banished form its counters all playthings suggestive of war, as a matter of policy.

ALICE HUGHES.

Mrs. Estelle M. Sternberger, executive director of World Peaceways, Inc., is behind this new ruling, whose wisdom I leave you to ponder. Mrs. Sternberger feels that if war can be made to seem hateful to boys during their early, impressionable years, as men they will detest it with an even greater fervor.

Mrs. Ethel Custer, toy buyer for this particular store, had already laid in her Christmas supply of soldiery and warfare. But back went every last soldier and tank, right to the manufacturer whence they came, with an explanation of this military turn-about-face. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was first to wire Mrs. Custer a congratulatory message commending her for selling only toys of a healthier interest, with no hint of hazard or hurt to any man.

I consulted the helpmate as to his attitude in this matter, since he is an aging U. S. veteran, with a daily embellished yarn of how he got gassed in the Argonne. He opined as how little boys intuitively lean toward weapons in their play. That a mere stick, by some sort of sixth sense at once becomes a bayonet in a small boy's fist. He says in theory he agrees with the World Peaceways, Inc., but that now it's over, he wouldn't swap his two years of making his country safe for democracy for anything else that has ever happened to him. So, you'll have to form your own attitudes. As for me, I packed all of young Martin's soldiers in a box and sent them down to the storage room.

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Mmm! I had a look and a whiff of how the other half lives the other day! I drove up to a stiff little red-and-white Georgian house at the corner of Fifth avenue and Ninety-fourth street to interview the Italian Princess Cora Caetani, house guest of Mrs. Harrison Williams. It happens that the very social Mrs. Williams was giving a cosy little dinner for 30 that evening, and in the hallway I all but collided with the caterers bearing the fixings for the party. The dining room and foyer were heavily scented with tall, flowering plants of mimosa.

The footman hoisted me to the Princess' suite on the third floor, in a shaky, self-operating elevator that might have been in your house or mine. And there was the Princess, receiving me most democratically, with curlers in her hair and a bedful of Schiaparelli clothes, which she modeled for me. She's here to represent the Italian government's interest in synthetic, laboratory made fabrics, and Il Duce couldn't have a more charming or more capable ambassadress of business. After we'd finished seeing the fabrics, as I made for the dubious elevator, I caught the most heavenly scent, and sniffed so ecstatically that the Princess said, "Oh, you're just passing Mrs. Williams' bathroom. She uses white lilac bath oil. Isn't it divine?" The rest I don't remember, except for the quavers of that elevator.

The night the Normandie came in, I was busy with fashion futures, so I couldn't board the boat. But instinct led me to El Morocco after the show, and who was sitting at the bar, surrounded by four men, but the glamorous Marlene Dietrich, all dressed in her green wool travel dress, with a skirt that splits like a pair of trousers and whose hat was the old mannish slouch kind.

Cheers for Miriam Hopkins! She put her new husband, Anton Litvak, on the Normandie bound for Europe, and dashed right up to Fifty-seventh street for a new mink coat. I ran across her, and I applaud her for not being perfectly groomed. Her longish, flaxen curls were not neat; her nose needed powdering and she looked nice and natural. In my business I see an awful lot of well-groomed women, and perfection palls on me every now and then.

Today's HEALTH TALK

by Logan Clendening, M. D.

Help Fight Tuberculosis.

There is a kind of an eternal dispute that goes on concerning the reason for the decline in tuberculosis. There is no question about the facts. In the last 50 years the death rate from tuberculosis has been reduced more than half. In the last 30 years, it has gone from the position of "Captain of the Men of Death," the most frequent cause of disease, to the seventh most frequent.

In 1900 over 200 people per 100,000 population died of the disease. In 1935 this was cut down to nearly 50 per 100,000. Tuberculosis was the only disease in the United States which showed a decline in 1935 from 1934. There are, of course, still plenty of cases and still much work to be done. It is estimated that there are over 500,000 active cases in the United States.

The task of instructing these people in how to take care of themselves and how to prevent giving the disease to others is done through many agencies. Long ago, the facilities of the private practitioner were found to be inadequate to proper control and eradication. States and cities have put up special sanitaria, and through the tuberculosis association, an active campaign in ferreting out cases which should be under treatment goes on constantly. In this work the money which is derived from the Christmas seals is very useful.

This idea was started by Miss Bissell in Delaware in 1907. She raised $3,000 toward building a hospital for children sick with tuberculosis. In 1910 the National Tuberculosis Association took this idea up and make it a Nation-wide thing. So buy your Christmas seals as generously as circumstances will permit.

Simpler Lines Dominate New French Furniture

French furniture in the formal styles is appearing more often this season than it has for a number of years. The styles of Louis XV and Louis XVI are the favorites and these are often modified to suit the present trend toward more simplicity in furniture. Ornamentation is less lavish, for example, than in the originals and there are new finishes which bring out the beauty of the woods more effectively.

Diet With Vitamin Pills Makes Possible Loss of 4 Lbs. Weekly.

By Ida Jean Kain.

YOU CAN TAKE a pill and lose from three to four pounds a week, if it's a vitamin pill. Overweights who are in a hurry to slim down will be keenly interested in the high vitamin diets for reducers.

These diets differ markedly from those by which the two pound a week maximum loss usually favored by the medical profession is achieved. The daily menus were cut to 500 or 600 calories, but the diets supplied optimum amounts of protein, vitamins and mineral salts. This was accomplished by keeping the protein content of the menus high, and through the addition of vitamin concentrates A, B and D, and calcium phosphate. These experiments were conducted at the Mayo clinic and a full report was given by Russell M. Wilder, M. D., in "International Clinics," 1933.

Aside from the fact that the reducers on these high vitamin diets lost from three to four pounds a week with no ill effects, the experiments were amazing in other respects. There were no complaints of hunger, as might be expected with such a rate of loss. Nor did the reducers experience the unwonted fatigue, irritability and nervousness which ordinarily occur on a program in which weight loss exceeds two pounds a week. That the reducers were free from these discomforts was attributed to the high protein content of the diets and to the supplementary vitamins and mineral salts.

Vitamins give you vim and vigor.

Vitamins A and D were given in concentrated codliver oil, four capsules daily. (It was suggested that one capsule of a preparation of halibut oil with viosterol should be equally effective.) The calcium and phosphorus was supplied in calcium phosphate in the amounts of two level teaspoons daily. Six vitamin B yeast tablets were given daily.

The diet consisted of 70 grams of protein, 12 grams of fat and 40 grams of carbohydrate, totaling 548 calories. Citrous fruits and tomatoes or cabbage were given daily as a source of vitamin C.

Experimental Subjects Comment on Lack of Any Fatigue.

If reducers on this type of diet feel so well by the addition of vitamins to the food intake, it follows that even on the 1,200-calorie diet you would benefit for the use of one concentrated vitamin A and D capsule, and one vitamin B and G capsule, daily. Vitamins increase vitality, not weight. Remember, only calories affect your weight.

Following is the 600 calorie diet used in the experiments, which must be supplemented by the requisite vitamin mineral concentrates:

Breakfast.

Orange juice (50 grams), ¼ glass, or, tomato juice, 2-3 glass
1 egg and 2 egg whites, poached
Bread (10 grams), ½ thin slice
Coffee, clear

Luncheon.

String beans (100 grams), ½ cup
Skimmed milk (200 grams), 1 glass
Grapefruit (50 grams), ¼ grapefruit
Tea

Dinner.

Bouillon, fat free, 1 cup
Broiled tenderloin (60 grams), 1 small lean tenderloin
Tomatoes (100 grams), ½ cup
Cottage cheese salad (1-3 cup cheese; ½ head lettuce), mineral oil, mayonnaise
Tangerine

Stokowski Is Welcomed By D. C. Society Ovation

Philadelphia Symphony Concert in Constitution Hall Attracts Diplomats and Officials, making Event a Gala One.

New York may have had its opening of the Metropolitan Opera early in the week, but last night's concert of the Philadelphia Symphony was, for Washington society, almost as swanky an event. The fact that the great Leopold Stokowski was conducting brought out the Capital's best, and made of the concert an event even more gala than usual.

Diplomats and officials set their dinner hours ahead last night so as to be in their seats at Constitution Hall at the first lift of the baton. Many of those present had been in the audience which gave Stokowski such a great ovation last year when he made his final appearance here as regular conductor for the orchestra. Others present had seen him in action for the first time in his movie, "100 Men and a Girl," which he made after his visit here last season.

Every box—almost every seat in fact—was taken. Mme. Troyanovsky, wife of the Soviet Ambassador, occupied her usual place at the left of the stage, and she was accompanied by Mme. Oumansky, wife of the Counselor, and several other members of the Embassy staff. The symphony played was by Dmitri Shostakovich, distinguished Russian, who was at one time ordered by the Communist government to change his style of writing, as it was becoming, they said, too "fancy."

Mabel Boardman Arrives Early

Miss Mabel Boardman arrived well ahead of time, and had with her in her box several guests, including Justice Benjamin Cardozo and Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis, who wore an ermine wrap over her ice blue satin gown. Further along in the tier were Justice Harlan Fiske Stone and Mrs. Stone and the Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. Victor Mallet. Others from the Diplomatic Corps were Mme. Saito, wife of the Japanese Ambassador, who wore a mink coat over her white brocaded evening gown; the Austraian Minister and Mme. Prochnik, Lady Marler, wife of the Minister of Canada; Anthony de Balasy of the Hungarian Legation; the Counselor of the Polish Embassy and Mme. Wankowicz, and Marquis Capomazza of the Italian Embassy.

Mrs. Tracy Dows, a faithful concert goer, looked her usual distinguished self in a black crepe dinner gown with a silver fox wrap. Mrs. Cary T. Grayson was another music lover present.

Princess Attends With Husband

Seen during the entra-acte were Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, Mrs. Isabella Gest, Miss Willa Magee, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Hildebrand, J. B. Wyckoff, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Bourne, Theodore Dominick, Mrs. Edwin Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Clark, Miss Moira Archbold, Miss Lee Washington, Mrs. Drew Pearson, in a gown of gold lame exactly the color of her hair, and Miss Rachel Campbell.

Guest Quizzed At Drury Fete

George Vivian Talks to Full House on University of the Theater.

Mrs. Abner Drury's attractive home on Bancroft place was filled to the doorstep yesterday afternoon with friends who had gathered to hear her guest of honor, George Vivian, well known stage director, speak on his pet project, "A University of the Theater."

One of the guests, who asked in the open forum that followed his talk what he thought about the Broadway hit, "The Women," practically brought down Mrs. Drury's house. What he said was "off the record."

Among the guests was Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, in a dark dress trimmed with little dashes of blue, who chatted with Mrs. Fred Biermann, in black and gold, about "this saeson's hats." And, Mrs. Copeland added, it is right on the record that she will be here in Washington until December 22, when she will dash up to New York to spend Christmas at home.

Among others there were Mme. Rajamaitri, in black with silver fox; Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, wearing a striking, close fitting hat of soft white feathers, and Mrs. J. Clinton Tribby.

Assisting Mrs. Drury, who wore a lovely black and white paisley embroidered frock, were Mrs. Robert Moran, Mrs. James Moran, Mrs. George Allen, Mrs. Barge Hartz, Mrs. Oswald Schutte, Mrs. Mackenzie Davidson, Mrs. Samuel Alexander, Mrs. Robert Patterson and Mrs. Stephen Burke.

The J. C. Tweddles Making Home Here

The Rev. R. J. Sturgill officiated at the wedding November 14 in Elkton, Md. Mrs. Tweddle was Miss Effie Jane McInnis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin McInnis, of Wilmington, N. C. Her husband is the son of Mrs. Sarah Tweddle and the late Robert Tweddle, of Norfolk.

For several years Mrs. Tweddle was assistant manager of the North Carolina State Fair in Raleigh. For three years she has been an employe of the Navy Department.

Mr. Tweddle is also with the Navy Department as inspector of construction at the model testing basin in Carderock, Md.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

"I NEVER SAW so many white fox capes and veils in my life," said Mrs. Lawrence Townsend yesterday. Washington's leading patron of music was speaking of the brilliant opening of the Metropolitan Opera in New York on Monday evening.

"It used to be tiaras at openings," she continued. "Now it's veils—long, down to the waist, short, thin, thick, and some of them decorated with little gold sequins. The only tiara I saw was that worn by Mme. Lauritz Melchior." The Danish singer, Lauritz Melchior, will stay with Mrs. Townsend when he comes to Washington in January to sing at one of her musicales. She is trying to persuade Mme. Melchior to come down, too.

Also present at the opening of the Met were the Italian Ambassador and Donna Matilde de Suvich, who were with Myron Taylor in his box. Mr. Taylor has a villa in Italy, and last summer entertained there Mrs. James Roosevelt, sr., and John Roosevelt.

On Sunday afternoon Mrs. Townsend and the Suviches attended a showing of paintings by Count Castelbarco, Italian son-in-law of Toscanini, who may bring his pictures to Washington this winter. Also at the showing were Elsa Maxwell and Lucrezia Bori, who usually stays with Mrs. Tracy Dows when she visits Washington.

Mrs. Townsend will return to New York December 16 to attend the opera "Romeo and Juliet," in which Richard Crooks and Bidaou Sayo, who will appear this winter at her musicales, will sing.

NEWS AND GOSSIP:

Two visitors to this country are still in New York before coming to the Capital, but already every minute of their stay here is booked up. That's Washington for you! Surely no other city is as hospitable to visiting firemen, who can eat their way through a solid winter here.

The people in question are Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Downe, of Paris, who will arrive in the Capital on Monday, December 13. Their home in the Rue Verdi of the French capital often has been called "the permanent American Embassy," as Mrs. Downe is one of the leading hostesses in the American colony.

Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, widow of Senator Hitchcock, will give a dinner for the Downes the evening they arrive. The next night they will dine at the White House, as both are good friends of the Roosevelts. Others who will entertain for Mr. and Mrs. Downes are Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, whose late husband was a cousin of the President; Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, Clarence Hewes and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Clark.

* * * *

SPEAKING OF VISITING firemen—a number of parties are being planned for Mrs. George W. Crawford, of New York and Pittsburgh, who arrives Friday to visit Mrs. Francis Whitten. She will remain over the week-end. On Staurday afternoon Mrs. Whitten will give a cocktail party for her. That evening Ralph Snowden Hill will be host at a dinner at his home in Georgetown. On Sunday Clarence Hewes is giving a luncheon, and that night Mrs. Whitten will entertain at dinner for her guest.

* * * *

CROWDED HOURS: Hectic is the word for Washington just now, with the calendar filled with parties such as Myron Hofer's dinner tonight at his beautiful home on F street, formerly the home of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman; the dinner which Capt. and Mrs. John Gibbons are giving on Monday evening at their house on N street, and the party on Friday evening at which Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss will be hosts, with an entertainer from New York coming down . . . Yesterday the Commissioner of Immigration and Mrs. Lawrence Houghteling entertained at a small cocktail party at their home on Wyoming avenue, and earlier in the week the Charge d'Affaires of the Netherlands Legation and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg had a small party between 5 and 7 o'clock . . . Mrs. Edwin Meredith, whose late husband was at one time Secretary of Agriculture, has cards out for a tea on Sunday.

Admiral Smith At Mayflower

Rear Admiral Norman M. Smith, U. S. N., whose retirement becomes effective today, is at the Mayflower with Mrs. Smith. They have given up the house they occupied at 2400 Wyoming avenue and will be at the hotel until they leave for a trip south that will include a visit in South Carolina and Florida.

Commander Ben Morrell, who has been named to succeed Admiral Smith as chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, automatically will assume the rank of rear admiral.

* * * *

Capt. and Mrs. H. B. Mecleary are spending the week in Washington at the Mayflower. They will remain in the East until after the Christmas holidays, dividing their time between New York City and their home in Newport. They will leave the first of the year for Capt. Mecleary's new station in Honolulu.

Their daughter, Miss Ann Mecleary, is in New York, and will accompany her parents back to Newport. The entire family will spend Christmas in New York with Read Mecleary, son of Capt. and Mrs. Mecleary.

* * * *

Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman entertained at a luncheon for 16 yesterday in honor of Mrs. Ronald Fairfax, of Roanoke, Va., who is spending a few days in Washington. Mrs. William King, wife of Senator King, was the ranking guest.

Mrs. Fairfax will entertain at the Sulgrave Club Saturday afternoon.

Announce Birth.

Capt. Clarence L. Taylor, V. C., U. S. A., and Mrs. Taylor announce the birth of a son, Charles Stanley, on November 24. The child is the grandson of Col. G. H. Casaday, U. S. A., retired. Mrs. Taylor was the former Miss Elizabeth Jane Cassaday.

Diplomats Aid Film Society

Envoys of Several Lands Sponsor Washington Organization.

Others from the Diplomatic Corps on the list of sponsors include Alexander Troyanovsky, Soviet Ambassador; Fulvio de Suvich, Ambassador of Italy; Dr. Chengting T. Wang, Ambassador of China; Hirosi Saito, Ambassador of Japan; Felipe A. Espil, Ambassador of Argentina; Otto Wadsted, Minister of Denmark, and Jules Henry, Charge d'Affaires of the French Embassy.

Also added to the list of sponsors are Miss Elizabeth Dyer, Mrs. Ned Brunson Harris, Mrs. Jessie Moon Holton, Mr. and Mrs. Will Hutchins, Mrs. David Karrick, Hardie Meakin, Gen. and Mrs. Clay Newcomer, Mrs. Owen Roberts, Mrs. William North Sturtevant and Mrs. Lucy Madeira Wing.

The second of the programs will be given tonight at 8:30 and includes, among other features, "The Covered Wagon," epic of silent film days.

Mrs. Robinson To Be Tea Guest

Returns to America After Eighteen Months on Visit to Europe.

Mrs. Bessie Forbes Robinson will be guest of honor at the tea to be given Saturday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock, at Kenmore, home of Betty Washington Lewis, in Fredericksburg, Va. Mrs. Robinson has just returned from Stockholm, Sweden, where she has been visiting her son-in-law and daughter, Lynn Franklin, of the Consular Service, and Mrs. Franklin. The first part of her 18-month stay abroad was spent in Barcelona, where Mr. Franklin, who was Consul there at that time, did outstanding work in evacuating Americans from the war zones.

Mrs. John Wallace and Mrs. Michael Wallace will be hostesses at the tea and will be assisted by Miss Margaret Wallace.

* * * *

Mrs. Wallace White, wife of Senator White, has gone to Maine for an indefinite stay at her home in Auburn. En route she stopped in New York for a brief time at the Waldorf Astoria.

* * * *

Now in New York are Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey G. Perker, jr., of this city, who are stopping at the Weylin. They will return to their home in Georgetown tomorrow.

D. C. Girl Scouts Assist in Welcoming Guests At Tea of Mrs. Frederick Brooke, President

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Cordial Girl Scouts welcomed the guests and assisted in serving yesterday at the tea given by Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, president of the National Girl Scouts of America, at her Georgetown home. The guests included officers of the organization and a group of newspaperwomen.

All the girls who assisted were from Troop 8, of which Mrs. LeRoy Barton is leader. The troop originally was Mrs. Hoover's. The girls had worked on the model of the first Girl Scout meeting house made by the troop last spring. The model was given to the Natoinal Girl Scout Little House, in charge of Mrs. E. G. Bowman, and was displayed in the Garfinckel window devoted to the Scouts during the Community Chest campaign.

Girls Greet Guests.

Arriving guests were greeted by groups of three girls in green uniforms with yellow ties. Keeping solemn guard over the affair was Cretziano, Mrs. Brooke's German shepherd dog, who took a place of vantage at the top of the stairs.

Mrs. Brooke, who received in the drawing room, wore a black velvet gown and a strand of pearls. Assisting at the tea table, on which chrysanthemums in autumn shades formed the centerpiece, were Mrs. Barton, Mrs. Bowman, Mrs. Martin Jones and Mrs. Henry Flather.

The assisting Girl Scouts were the Misses Christina Testa, Joy Avery, Elsie Beth Hovey, Mary Duggan, Ruth Ohler, Mary Ann Brown, Matilda Betts and Ruth Dowden.

Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, who was among the guests, had returned only yesterday mornnig from visiting her son in Columbus, Ohio, arriving just in time for a regional Girl Scout meeting at which she was hostess at her home. Mrs. Brooke was among those at the session.

Partial List of Guests.

Among others who attended both the regional meeting and the tea were Mrs. Vance McCormick, of Harrisburg, Pa.; Mrs. John A. Frick, Allentown, Pa.; Mrs. B. F. Cheatham, Stratford, Va.; Mrs. Stuart McGuire, Richmond, Va.; Mrs. B. Swift Newton, Berwyn, Pa.; Mrs. Legh R. Powell, jr., Norfolk, Va., and Mrs. Samuel Arnold 3d, Pittsburgh.

Also present were Mrs. William Floyd Crosby, Mrs. Proctor Dougherty, Mrs. Martin Jones, Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. George Seriven, Mrs. William I. Myers, Mrs. H. C. Kramer, Mrs. John C. Borton, Mrs. O. G. Hankins, Mrs. Daniel Knowlton, Mrs. N. R. Ellis and Mrs. Robert V. Laughlin.

Also among the guests was a lone man, apparently quite unabashed by being so out-numbered by the ladies. He was A. Schaeffer, jr., executive secretary of the public relations division of the national Girl Scouts, who was here from New York for the day.

Today, at 12:30, they will all join in their monthly reciprocity luncheon at Woodward & Lothrop's. Chapter E, of which Mrs. Russell O. Kluge is president, will be hostess and the program will be a short talk on a trip to Mexico, given by Mrs. R. P. Hollingsworth, who will wear a Mexican costume. The program will be brief as, with the approach of the Christmas season, it is deemed likely many of the members will have Christmas shopping on their minds.

Boston Address By Mrs. Shouse

Mrs. Jouett Shouse (Catherine Filene Shouse), chairman of the board of the Institute of Women's Professional Relations, and author of "Careers for Women," last night presented interesting views on women's problems in an address before the Women's City Club of Boston.

"The song of the feminist who claims that women can get nowhere in this man-made world is growing more and more feeble and makes me angry," she declared. "Women are working with and not against men in hundreds of lines, and the success of these women is helping other women get jobs. They have attained success because they have decided what they wanted to do and have done it. That is the great crux in the whole question of women's attainments, whether it be in a job, in public service or in her own personal experience."

Mrs. Shouse expressed belief there was an abundant field of endeavor for the older woman. "There are always new developments which call for new activities into which we can throw our efforts," she said. "There is always a place in any community for a real worker."

"Modern times require an awakened interest not only in what is being done occupationally at present but also in the trends that point to the work demands of the future," she asserted.

Party to Honor Flying Caravan On December 11

Secretary Hull, Peru Envoy to Speak at Luncheon for "Good-Will' Group.

The Flying Caravan of the People's Mandate Committee is homeward bound, and invitations are being issued for a luncheon to be given in honor of its members, December 11, at the Carlton. Secretary of State Cordell Hull and the Ambassador of Peru will speak and Representative Caroline O'Day, vice chairman of the People's Mandate Committee, will preside at the "welcome home" party at which 200 guests from diplomatic and official Washington will be present.

The caravan is leaving Bogota, Colombia, today, returning through Central America and Mexico, and will arrive in Washington December 10, according to an announcement by Mabel Vernon, director of the mandate committee. A reception is being arranged for the good-will messengers at the airport when they reach the Capital.

Everywhere they have stopped they have been received with enthusiasm. In Chile, the native country of Mrs. Thomas Burke, ranking member of the caravan delegation, they received a tremendous reception, an airmail report to Miss Vernon says—and even the taxi drivers in Santiago knew about her coming. The letters describe the trip across the Andes as "the roughest in history."

Other members of the caravan are Mrs. Burton Musser, of Salt Lake City; Mrs. Rebecca Hourwich Reyher, of New York, and Mrs. Enoch W. Frost, of Arkansas. Each will speak briefly at the luncheon, recounting different experiences on their 17,000-mile tour of the Americas in support of the ratification of the Buenos Aires peace treaties.

Among honor guests at the affair will be Mrs. Hull, the heads of Latin-American missions and their wives, prominent Government officials and heads of organizations interested in the mandate committee.

Berlin-Rome Axis Will Be Discussed

Washington Club Will Hear Miss McQuown.

The Berlin-Rome axis and this week's Franco-British conversations will be the leading subjects of Miss McQuown's lecture on current problems at the Washington Club Thursday at 11 a. m.

In the home field there will be a brief discussion of tax exempt securities and suggested aids for business.

She also will give personal recollections of some of the people and places in today's headlines of the Chinese conflict.

Pendexters to Honor Alumni of Wesleyan

In honor of the D. C. Alumni Asssociation of Wesleyan College, Middletown, Conn., Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Stevens Pendexter have issued cards for an at home at their residence in Aurora Hills, Va., Sunday from 5 to 7. Dr. Pendexter, the president, will be assisted by officers of the association.

Mrs. Pendexter will be assisted by Mrs. Harvey Gram, jr., Mrs. Henry F. Lerch 3d, Mrs. James H. Defandorf, Mrs. George W. M. Vinal, Mrs. Samuel H. Harvey.

Fraternities to Fete American U. Students

Students of the graduate school of American University have been invited to a dessert party to be held at 1901 F street Saturday evening. The joint hosts will be chapters of the two national fraternities, Phi Delta Gamma and Chi Psi Omega.

Miss Marjorie Webster, of Phi Delta Gamma, is in charge of the program, with the committee in charge headed by Dr. Emmet Sebree and Miss Elsie Rakestraw.

Sen. Barkley Heads Kentuckians At State Society's Country Fair

Senator Alben W. Barkley, Gen. and Mrs. Allen Gullion and Thomas Haymond, Kentucky, member of the National Bituminous Coal Commission, were guests of honor at the Kentucky State Society's dance and country fair in the ballroom of the Willard Hotel last night.

Early in the evening a hill billy band played for an old-fashioned square dance, which was a feature of the entertainment. Members of the society who participated had been practicing faithfully for days to perfect their steps and they presented it without a hitch. Among the dancers were Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo Martin, Maj. and Mrs. Davison, Miss Mae Helm, Carl Murr, Miss Fannie Walthen, Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Stanley, jr., Ernest May, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Edmonds and Mr. and Mrs. James Letcher.

A baby show, in which prizes were awarded to men in the society who donned their baby caps and enrolled in the contest, was another entertaining part of the program. A more serious and impressive feature was the presentation of a Kentucky State flag to the society by Mrs. Lorenzo Martin, former president of the organization.

The country fair was in charge of Mrs. E. C. Purdy, who stood guard over a tempting assortment of cakes, pies, beaten biscuits, candy and home-made jellies, contributed by the women of the society to be given as prizes at the end of the evening. Dancers slowed down to look over the attractive array as they passed and also to inspect the live turkey and live duck which were the grand prizes of the evening.

Mrs. Edmonds, president of the society named as committees for the dance: Floor committee, R. E. Adams, chairman; Hamilton Alexander, Lewis Barnes, Albert Krauner, James Hobday, Basil Cooper; decorations, Mrs. Martin, chairman; Mrs. Stanley, Mrs. Frank Howard, Mrs. W. M. Temple and Mrs. Waldo Clark.

In spite of all the wisecracks and dead cats, Jimmy Roosevelt has emerged quite unscathed from his appointment as grand vizier and more popular than ever . . . Some of the more gallant Senators are inclined to forgive Senator Dixie Bibb Graves for making her maiden speech after she had attended only half a dozen sessions of the Senate, instead of waiting a year, as is traditional.

One of the Washington's richest men, many times a millionaire, a hard worker with no taste for folderols, weakened in the hot summer and leased a yacht from a rich friend so he could cool off occasionally.

Although used yachts were a drug on the market, the rental and operating costs ran to several thousand a month.

What the Duke of Windsor really would like, I'm told by a New Yorker whose transatlantic phone bills are truly terrific, is to be attached to the British Embassy in Washington.

He would have the same status as other honorary attaches of good birth and ample fortune, who serve without pay for the fun of the thing and for the experience.

* * *

Thus he could start at the "bottom of the ladder" and work his way up to a diplomatic career, for which he is said to feel now he is better fitted than for a career as a housing expert.

Much as he might feel he could contribute to the entent cordiale between the two great English speaking nations, and much as the Duchess might like it, the arrangement is apparently out of the question at present.

But there was the usual talk about Garner as the heir-apparent, but with this striking difference from similar talk during the 1932 campaign.

Washington has replaced Broadway and Hollywood as the focal point of the national spotlight . . . One great weekly magazine, realizing that New York is passe as the scene of popular fiction, and that Hollywood is too tinselly, has sent several of its star writers to Washington with instructions to spend six months or a year here and turn out some illuminating short stories and articles about the Capital.

Nonresident Care Burden To Gallinger

By Gerald G. Gross

Most of Gallinger Hospital's woes may be traced to a common basic cause—overcrowding. And an important contributing factor to the institution's congestion is the mounting number of nonresidents who, without paying a cent, impose themselves upon the hospital's facilities.

They are women, some indigent and some not, living in the nearby Maryland and Virginia suburbs who, in the pains of labor, go to Gallinger's doors and demand admittance.

They are cases of meningitis, scarlet fever or some other communicable disease who are literally shipped to Gallinger from points outside the District more out of community self-defense than for humanitarian reasons.

3 Per Cent Nonresident.

They are psychopaths, also nonresidents, who may demand, or whose relatives may demand, observation and treatment in an institution authorized by law to accept only District citizens. Exception may be made in cases of nonresident patients, provided they pay for services rendered and that their stay does not keep a resident indigent case out of a bed.

"To make a conservative estimate about 3 per cent of all admissions are nonresidents," Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, told the writer yesterday. "Only a very small minority of them pay, in full or in part, for the treatment they receive here."

Statistically, the present situation is this: Total admissions last year exceeded 18,000. Nonresidents, then, numbered approximately 540. The average patient stay is 11 days. Multiply 540 by 11 and you get 5,940 patient-days by non-District persons. Multiply that by $2.12, the average cost of taking care of one patient a day, and the total is $12,592.80.

What Funds Could Buy.

Even if half this amount were defrayed by nonresident patients, Gallinger would still be "out" more than $6,000, enough to hire four more urgently needed graduate nurses or to create an adequate social service department or buy enough pneumonia serum to save 150 lives.

Gallinger Hospital follows a policy of taking in every genuine emergency case seeking admittance. A hemorrhaging auto victim, an acute appendix, a woman in the throes of childbirth—none is turned away. Arrangements for the admittance permit are made afterward.

And there's the rub. According to Dr. Bocock and resident physicians, Virginians and Marylanders in nearby counties are taking advantage of this humane policy. Further complicating the situation is the initiative taken by private hospitals, receiving nonresidents or transients who can't pay a bill, to get out from under by hustling the case off to Gallinger, which won't turn it down if it is an emergency.

One Case Described.

On Monday night, for example, a woman was transferred to Gallinger from a private hospital here. A transient, she had been sent to the first institution by Arlington County authorities. She was in early labor and, besides, was suffering from a severe case of the contagious skin disease called impetigo.

In this instance, the private hospital could hardly be held guilty of passing the buck since it does not accommodate communicable disease cases. But this fact does not lessen the expense Gallinger went to in installing the woman in the isolation pavilion and making the preparations necessary to deliver her child there.

It is highly improbable that this particular woman will or can pay for the service she is receiving and will continue to receive. If her home town or county can be determined, Gallinger officials may try to induce the local government to foot the bill. But it rarely works.

And the main joker is this: Even when non residents or, for that matter, District residents able to pay all or part of the cost of treatment in the isolation or psychopathic pavilions do meet the stipulated fee, Gallinger does not get to keep one penny of the receipts. The money goes into the Treasury's general fund.

Hence, the damned if you do and damned if you don't enigma which finds Gallinger Hospital being compelled, by circumstances, to accept "ineligibles" gratis when by doing so it is aggravating the very problem of overcrowding which Supt. Bocock is trying desperately to remedy.

"The percentage of nonresidents who are admitted, sizable though it is, is small compared to the number who try to get in," he said. "We are almost constantly being besieged by calls from welfare workers, hospitals and the prospective patients themselves—all arguing that this out-of-town case is different and should be admitted."

D.C. Taxes Trebled In Last 18 Years

A survey showing that tax collections in the District have trebled in the last 18 years and the per capita cost of operating the local government in the same period has increased 116.3 per cent, was released yesterday by the municipal finance committee of the Washington Board of Trade.

The survey, made by Maj. J. Donovan, District auditor, was cited by the Board of Trade to support its opposition to an increased budget and higher taxation. It reveals increased expenditures since 1920 in most municipal departments.

Edgar Morris, chairman of the committee, predicted on the basis of increased tax collections shown, that total receipts this year will be four times those of 1920. Some increases, he conceded, probably are justified by the growth of the city, but added "other increases are entirely too large and we hope to be able to determine the reasons for this and to make recommendations for economies."

Bowie Track Noted for Coral Growth.

If memory is not playing me false, it was about this time last year that panicky Bowie track officials, alarmed at a series of sponging cases, said they were going to crack down. The grounds would be policed, a fence would be erected about the premises and questionable characters would get the old heave-ho.

POVICH.

If they built that fence at all, they should have built it higher, and the suspicion is that those were Keystone comedy cops that the tracks hired, because the past two days have produced four admitted sponging cases, and who knows how many others not yet revealed?

It is not surprising that Bowie, alone of the Maryland tracks, is the haven for spongers. The last track to hold forth in the North each season, Bowie is on the direct route to Southern courses and a point of concentration for the "fixers." And the rewards are always heavy at Bowie because of the heavy wagering.

For a period of two weeks each fall, Bowie draws virtually all the money wagered on the horses in the United States. Its only opposition is the New Orleans track, where the mutuel play is light. The "comeback" money dumped into the mutuels by the bookies throughout the country sends the Bowie totals rocketing and ripens the track for a killing.

The saliva tests now demanded at all tracks after a poor performance by an entry have scared off the swindlers who used to stimulate the horses with narcotics or ennervate them with sedatives fed through the mouth. But the saliva tests have driven the "fixers" to sponging in increased numbers, apparently. Certainly sponging cases have been more frequent since the tracks cracked down on the use of narcotics.

Sponging Is an Art.

The sponges used are not sponges in the common meaning of the word, but tufts of cotton or silk or gauze used in hospitals. A "sponge" inserted far up in one nostril of the horse by a thin stick or tightly wound newspaper impedes the horse's breathing sufficiently to throw him off form.

But the spongers must do their work well after gaining entrance to the stall. Too large a sponge would cause a hemmorhage and reveal the "fix." Too small a sponge might be emitted by the horse during the early part of the race and upset the coup. Sponging is a kind of art.

Unless the trainer "blows out" the horse with a full-speed eighth of a mile gallop before the race, the chances are that the sponge will not be revealed until after the steed's poor performance in the race and heavy breathing arouses suspicions. Then, a pencil light flashed far into the nostrils is often necessary to reveal the obstruction.

And unless the trainers insist on a search for a sponge, the track veterinarians may not consider it within their province to make their own investigation. The veterinarians are concerned chiefly with the saliva tests when a disappointing performance leads a horse to the spit box. There is an idea, also, that more saliva tests would be made by the tracks if the cost of analyzing the results were a bit lower than $35 for each analysis.

Trainers Protected.

In the sponging cases revealed yesterday, it is fairly evident that the fixers got to Buck Langhorne and Indomitable in an effort to "shoo home" Alladin's Dream, the favorite. Buck Langhorne and Indomitable loomed as the chief source of contention for Alladin's Dream in the sixth race on Monday.

In fact there was a suspiciously heavy play on Alladin's Dream by bettors who apparently were in the know, for the horse was not among the first three selections in The Post's consensus of leading handicappers. In the morning line of Monday, Alladin's Dream was labeled a 6-to-1 shot. He paid off at $2.65 to $1.

The New York tracks give the horse trainers better protection than do the Maryland tracks. The Pinkerton agency in New York has insisted that all stable hands, grooms and exercise boys carry identification cards with photographic likenesses and any who fail to produce such a card on questioning are summarily given the bounce.

"Fix" Tried Here.

One of the most famed attempts to "get" to a groom occurred in Washington several years ago during the races at Laurel. At the old Sterling Hotel, on the corner of Thirteenth and E streets, two fixers approached a groom who would be in charge of the next day's favorite in the first race.

Handing him two bottles of sedatives akin to luminol, the fixers told the groom to feed both to the horse the morning of the race, promised him $100 if the horse did not win. The conscientious groom took the stuff, said he would follow directions, then hurriedly turned the bottles over to the trainer. An analysis disclosed powerful sedatives.

The favorite did, in fact, fail to win, finishing third, even though not tampered with. And, on the trainer's orders, the groom met the fixers at the appointed place that night and took the hundred bucks, nicely cheating the cheaters.

45,000 Fans To Witness Big Classic

Tigers Accept Bid for Third Straight Year in Contest.

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, Nov. 30.—Louisiana State University and the University of Santa Clara, opponents in the 1937 Sugar Bowl football classic, were picked today to meet again this New Year's Day.

The Sugar Bowl committee, for the first time since the contest was inaugurated in 1935, made its announcement before the Rose Bowl contestants were selected.

Joseph Cousins, president of the Mid-Winter Sports Association, which sponsors the game, said the committee was "happy in the thought that it has arranged the finest intersectional post-season football attraction obtainable."

L. S. U., the Nation's eighth ranking team in the Associated Press sports writers' poll, was runner-up for the Southeastern Conference championship, which it had held for the past two years. The Tigers won nine games and lost one, 6-7, to Vanderbilt. January 1 will mark L. S. U.'s third consecutive appearance in the bowl.

Santa Clara won all its eight games. Opponents were able to score only 9 points against it duing the season. It tied with Notre Dame for ninth place in the Associated Press poll.

L. S. U. accepted subject to Southeastern Conference approval. The conference has a rule that its teams can play only in the Sugar and Rose Bowl games.

It will be the third consecutive year the Tigers from the Louisiana bayous will have competed in the Sugar Bowl. Conference champions in 1935, 1936 and runner-up this season, the Tigers were defeated by Texas Christian, 3 to 2, in 1935—the first Sugar Bowl game. Last year they bowed, 21 to 14, to Santa Clara.

L. S. U. lost only to Vanderbilt, 7 to 6, this year. The defeat came on Vandy's famous mystery play, which caught the Tigers flatfooted. L. S. U. defeated Rice, potential Southwest Conference champion, and defeated Auburn, the team that held Villanova to a scoreless tie.

Santa Clara holds victories over such national gridiron stalwarts as Stanford, 13 to 7; St. Mary's 7 to 0, and Marquette, 38 to 0.

Michigan State To Orange Bowl.

Miami, Fla., Nov. 30 (AP).—Jack Baldwin, Orange Bowl committee schedule chairman, said today Michigan State College had accepted an invitation to play in the sixth annual New Year's Day football game here.

Baldwin declined to say which Southern teams were being considered to oppose Michigan State.

Coach Charley Bachman, of Michigan State, telephoned Jack Bell, Miami Daily News sports editor, from Seattle, Wash., that the Spartans were ready to play any opponent the committee might select. Bachman and his team are en route home from San Francisco.

Michigan State lost only one game this season, a 9-0 upset decision to Manhattan, and defeated Wayne, 19-0; Michigan, 19-14; Missouri, 2-0; Marquette, 21-7; Kansas, 16-0; Temple, 13-6; Carnegie Tech, 13-0, and San Francisco, 14-0.

Colorado to Play In 'Cotton Bowl'

The Coloradoans, undefeated and untied in seven Rocky Mountain Conference games, accepted the Cotton Bowl Association's bid last night.

The Rice Institute-Southern Methodist game here Saturday will decide the Buffalos' opponent. If Rice wins it will take the title. If it loses, Texas Christian will ascend automatically.

Farr to Meet Jim Braddock

By the United Press.

London, Nov. 30.—Tommy Farr, who was outpointed in 15 rounds by Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis last September, announced tonight he had accepted an offer from Promoter Mike Jacobs to fight former titleholder Jimmy Braddock, in Miami, Fla., February 26.

Upon receiving Jacobs' cable today, Farr picked up the telephone and called "Uncle" Mike in New York. The former Welsh coal miner did not reveal terms, but said it was a "very good" offer.

New York, Nov. 30 (U.P.).—Date for a Tommy Farr-Jimmy Braddock fight in Miami has not been set, Promoter Mike Jacobs told the United Press tonight.

"I cabled Farr an offer to meet an opponent, as yet unnamed, in Madison Square Garden January 21," Jacobs said. "He telephoned to accept the bout and asked for a shot at Jimmy Braddock, which he hopes will bring him a return fight with Joe Louis."

Terps' Ring Problems A Headache for Miller

By Lewis F. Atchison.

In the dim recesses of three small, smelly basement rooms of Ritchie Coliseum, Heine Miller, Maryland's boxing coach, is trying to weld a team capable of defending the Southern Conference crown which the first college team he ever coached won last year. And at this writing the problem has him on the ropes.

To begin at the beginning, Miller lost everything by graduation but the ring, two pairs of gloves and a few rolls of tape. The annual June ceremonies did everything but actually outlaw boxing in College Park. Only one man, Ben Alperstein, national intercollegiate lightweight champion, is back. That gives you a fair idea of the seriousness of the situation.

Ivan Nedomatsky, conference welterweight titleholder, tops the list of missing. "Nedo" now is campaigning in pro ranks and it will be many days before his equal pulls on a glove for Maryland.

Running through the list of the missing there is Ed Shegogue, a nifty little bantamweight who won three decisions, dropped one, and scored one knockout. Tom Birmingham, captain and probably the most improved man on the squad, who got one draw and then scored five consecutive knockouts and capped this performance by winning the conference lightweight title. Nedomatsky's record was identical.

Mike Lombardo, senior welterweight, lost the duke once, captured one decision and scored four knockouts. Bob Walton, middleweight, whose greatest feat was flattening Morty Kaplin, of Virginia; Johnny Gormley, a lightheavy who won two decisions and a knockout and went to the finals of the conference tournament, and Ed Egnell, a heavyweight, complete the list. Egnell won one, lost one and drew once, but he was considered Miller's brightest prospect for the approaching season. It isn't an inspiring picture.

Walton wasn't graduated, but after a strenuous football season apparently is going to take a much needed rest and devote his spare time to study. He would be the only other veteran on hand if he reported for ring work. It is interesting to note in passing that no Maryland boxer suffered so much as a bloodied nose last winter, hence it is not difficult to see the gigantic task facing Miller.

Maryland's cramped boxing quarters are packed to the door as Miller and Capt. John Maglin, his assistant, struggle to separate the wheat from the chaff, to single out those who may make fairly decent ringmen. The throng of perspiring young gladiators lend an air of hope to the situation, but the old adage about strength in numbers doesn't hold in this case.

Powell Voted Navy Leader

Arkansas Boy Succeeds Raymond F. Dubois.

Annapolis, Nov. 30.—Leadership of the Naval Academy football team shifted from New England to the South, the announcement being made today of the selection of Lucien C. Powell, jr., of Forester, Ark., as captain for next year, to succeed Raymond F. Dubois, of Naugatuck, Conn.

Powell began his Navy football as a plebe back, but was shifted to end last season and did a lot of playing. This year he has held the position of right end regularly, playing most of every game. He is a strong defense player and good pass receiver, 6 feet tall and weighing 170 pounds.

Powell also plays baseball, winning an "N" last year and booked as regular first baseman for the coming season.

The selection of Francis M. Bush, jr., of New Hebron, Miss., as manager, also was announced.

'Mutt' Womer Hurt.

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 30 (AP).—Maynard E. (Mutt) Womer, student and assistant boxing coach at the University of Virginia, was treated at the Martha Jefferson Hospital for arm and shoulder injuries received in an automobile accident near here.

Scott Is Set For Battle With Dunne

Ahearn and Menendez Smoke 'Pipe of Peace' as They Sign.

Goldie Ahearn, warlord of local boxing, and Gabe Menendez, the dapper Spanish count, have smoked the proverbial pipe of peace. As a result, Cowboy Howard Scott, the District lightweight champion, and Irish Eddie Dunne, Benny Leonard's young protege, will clash next Monday night in the feature match at Turner's Arena.

The match will be eight rounds.

Contracts were signed yesterday, and all is "honkey-dorey" once more along the Ninth street boxing front, especially when Menendez and Ahearn cross paths.

Scott and Dunne were to have clashed a few weeks ago at the Arena in a battle calculated to "stuff the joint," so to speak, but a matter of two rounds and a "slight misunderstanding" forced Mr. Irish Johnny Dean into the picture as Scott's substitute.

Scott's manager insisted on ten rounds, claiming the Cowboy was a slow starter, and Bennah Leonard demanded eight rounds. A few days before the bout Scott was released from his contract by the rotund matchmaker. Dunne won unanimously from Dean, just as Scott won from Irish Johnny a few weeks before on the Kiddies' Free Luncheon Card at Griffith Stadium.

Scott, having fought three world's champions and having more experience than Leonard's protege, may enter the ring a 7-5 favorite. Dunne, a rangy kid with a troublesome left, has won all of his matches here, having previously trimmed Joey Straiges and Sailor Borne.

Federal Cage League Opens; A.G.O. Is Winner

Government-Y Basketball League was off to a flying start last night with the crack team from the A. G. O. (War Department) dominating the first night's play with a 42 to 14 victory over Farm Credit Administration.

Internal Revenue, with Haija accounting for 10 points, chalked up a 21-to-14 win over Bureau of Standards in a rough game which saw a total of 18 personal fouls called.

P. W. A. nosed out a 22-to-21 victory over Interstate Commerce Commission. Coe, with 5 points, led the winners, while Brechtel's 12 points for the losers made him high individual scorer.

Three Games Scheduled In Basketball Loop

Three more games are scheduled tonight in the Heurich Cup Basketball League which opened play Monday night at the Heurich gym.

Sun Radio, formerly Rinaldi, last season's winners, opens defense of its title against Treasury at 8:30; at 7:30 Senate Beer meets Naval Hospital, and at 9:30 National Clay Products plays Lubseal.

Dixie Team 'Very Glad' To Go West

Sewanee, 65-0; South Carolina, 20-0; Tennessee, 14-7; George Washington, 19-0; Kentucky, 41-0; Tulane, 9-6; Georgia Tech, 7-0; Vanderbilt, 9-7.

California won these games: St. Mary's College, 30-7; Oregon State, 24-6; Washington State, 27-0; College of Pacific, 20-0; California Aggies, 14-1; University of Southern California, 20-6; U. C. L. A., 27-14; University of Oregon, 28-0, and Stanford, 13-0.

California ran up 201 points in ten games, to 33 for their opponents, an average of 20 points a game.

The Southern team has appeared in the Rose Bowl four times, winning three, tying one. In 1926 the Crimson Tide nosed out University of Washington, 20-19; in 1927 Alabama played to a 7-7 deadlock with Stanford; in 1931 it defeated Washington State College, 24-0 and in 1935 defeated Stanford 29-13.

In 1921, a California "wonder team" defeated Ohio State, 28-0. The next year the Bears played to a scoreless tie with Washington and Jefferson. In 1929 Georgia Tech defeated California, 8-7, in perhaps the most frequently mentioned of the Rose Bowl games. That was the game in which Roy Riegels, California's center, ran the wrong way 64 yards toward his own goal line in a now-celebrated moment of confusion.

Bama Officials Joyous At Bowl Invitation.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Nov. 30 (AP).—University of Alabama officials and players expressed keen delight tonight upon being informed the Crimson Tide had been selected to play for the fifth time in the Tournament of Roses game at Pasadena, Calif.

Athletic Director Hank Crisp, informed of the official announcement from Berkeley, Calif., by the United Press, said: "We are very glad of another opportunity to return to the Coast to play."

Crisp intimated the university earlier had notified University of California officials it would accept the bid.

Called from the basketball practice by the United Press, Crisp said the players and student body had not learned of Alabama's selection but that the squad had expressed keen interest in the game.

'Bama Band Blares, 'California, Here We Come'

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Nov. 30 (U.P.).—Alabama's "million-dollar" band struck up "California, Here We Come" tonight and the student body and Tuscaloosa literally went wild upon receipt of word the Crimson Tide had been selected to play for the fifth time in the Rose Bowl.

Held tense by three days of hoping and waiting for a bid to play in the annual Tournament of Roses at Pasadena, Calif., the students turned out en masse soon after news spread over the campus that University of California had accepted Alabama for its opponent.

Occoquan Wins.

The Franklin Sherman Junior High basketball team stepped out of its class yesterday to play Occoquan Senior High School a close game on the home floor before bowing, 11 to 10.

'Kelley of Yale' Describes Lingering Thrills Of Season; Rates Pittsburgh, Rams at Top

By Larry Kelley.

The season is over but the memories linger on . . .

That last-minute Frank-to-Hessberg pass in the Yale-Dartmouth game. Dartmouth was out in front, 9-2, with something like 30 seconds left in the ball game. Clint Frank shot a long pass to Al Hessberg, who made miracle catch and a miracle run over the goal line. Then Bud Humphrey added the tieing point with a perfect placement. What a game!

* * * *

Pitt's fourth quarter surge to down Nebraska. Played to a standstill for three quarters, Pitt was 7 points behind when the fourth period began. Then the enraged Panthers really went to work. They marched 80 yards for a touchdown, only to miss the placement that would have tied the score. So what did they do? They came right back to notch another touchdown. I have never seen such a display of sheer power.

* * * *

Fordham's razzle-dazzle attack that had Purdue seeing double. The Rams' justly celebrated as a defensive unit, really turned on the heat against the Boilermakers. Down 3 points when Cecil Isbell booted a field goal in the first period, the Rose Hillers came back with a rush. Reverses, double spinners, forward passes, forward-laterals, forward-double laterals—they used 'em all. The Rams really went to town that day.

* * * *

Army and Navy bogged down in the rain and fog on the world's worst day for football. Army taking to the air and throwing that wet ball around as though it had handles on it. The fine kicking of Craig and Wilson. Navy's dogged defense and inept attack. I'm still wet from the rain.

* * * *

Yale and Harvard at Cambridge. An inspired Crimson team that refused to be beaten. The superb running of Foley and MacDonald. The magnificient faking of Vernon Struck. The devastating charge of the Harvard forward wall. And the greatest figure of the field, the greatest figure on any football field during the year, Yale's Clint Frank. Frank, running, passing, blocking, tackling. Frank, tearing his heart out in a lost cause. Frank, collapsing at the final whistle because his overworked body refused to go any further. Clint Frank, an all-time all-America if ever there was one! one!

* * * *

It was a great season, one of the greatest. The upsets were plentiful. But what constitutes an upset? Teams are too evenly matched these days for one to be regarded as a sure thing over another. There are no more set-up schedules. Every game is a major game.

* * * *

What was the best team I saw during the year? That's a tough one. I can't decide between Pitt and Fordham. Perhaps Pitt has a stronger offense, but nobody can top that Fordham line. Both of them were great outfits—the best in the country. Talk all you want about your Alabamas, Villanovas, Californias and the rest. I'll take Pitt and Fordham!

* * * *

Now to wind up the season in the old accustomed way—by picking a team of the best players I saw in action during the fall. I herewith submit two elevens. There may be better players around but these are the best I saw. Everyone of them was chosen on the basis of actual performance under fire.

Souchak (Pitt.)	L.E.	Daughters (Harv.)
Matisi (Pitt.)	L.T.	Schreyer (Purdue)
Zitrides (Dart.)	L.G.	Lezouski (Pitt.)
Wojtwicz (Ford.)	Center	Brock (Nebr.)
Franco (Fordham)	R.G.	Mehring (Nebr.)
Barbartsky (Ford.)	R.T.	Booth (Harvard)
Dohrmann (Nebr.)	R.E.	Druse (Fordham)
Frank (Yale)	Q.B.	Howell (Nebr.)
Goldberg (Pitt.)	L.H.	Hessberg (Yale)
MacLeod (Dart.)	R.H.	Stebbins (Pitt.)
Struck (Harvard)	F.B.	Isbell (Purdue)

And so, so long for this year. I hope to see you again next fall when the opening whistle splits the air and the first kickoff goes sailing down the field.

'Whizzer' Gets 'Bird,' But He Can Take It

By Jack Cuddy.

New York, Nov. 30.—They booed him—actually!

If you pick up the Denver papers of Friday, Nov. 26, you will read about a lad named Byron White receiving a grand booing from the crowd because he stopped one Charley Loftus with a pick-up and slam-down tackle.

White was so upset by the booing that he apologized after the game. He told reporters that he was ashamed of himself for the Loftus tackle—didn't realize what he was doing, etc. He made alibis.

If White were sitting at my distant observation post from which he could get a true perspective of his own stature in the national football picture, I'm sure his rejoiner to those post-game reporters would have been, "Oh, nertz!" but maybe he isn't that kind of a fellow.

This White I am talking about is known as the "Whizzer" in sports circles. And the game in which he was booed was his last appearance as a college player—the Thanksgiving Day game in which White's Colorado University wound up the season with a perfect record and won the Rocky Mountain Conference Title for the first time since 1924, with a 34-7 victory over Denver.

In that game Whizzer White made three touchdowns, place-kicked four extra points and tossed two touchdown passes to boost his season's scoring total to 122 points, the best of any college player in the Nation.

I never saw White play. But I have read about Colorado's great quarterback, day after day for the last six weeks in any paper from any city I might pick up. I'm quite positive in saying that he received more publicity than any one player in the United States, and that he is the outstanding football individual of the 1937 season—and that he is better known from Coast to Coast than Clint Frank, of Yale; Marshall Goldberg, of Pittsburgh; Kilgrow, of Alabama; Wojciechowicz, of Fordham; Chapman, of California, etc.

Whizzer's fame is streamlined proof that the world will beat a path to your door if you have something worthwhile to sell. This 6-foot 190-pound quarterback had amazing power, speed, elusiveness, an accurate toe, and an accurate passing arm. The percentage was all against his receiving national recognition because he performed in the somewhat isolated Rocky Mountain conference. Colorado's University is at Boulder, Colo. But now he stands out like Pike's Peak.

When I first started reading those stories about the Thanksgiving game—the contest in which the lad from little Wellington, Colo., clinched the national scoring title, I wondered if the good citizens of Denver realized who it was they were booing. Did they realize they were giving the bird not only to the Nation's most captivating performer, but also to a Phi Beta Kappa scholar? That's right—Whizzer has had a straight "A" average in the university despite his activities in football, basketball and baseball.

The booing occurred in the third period when Whizzer stopped Loftus on a 15-yard gain. White whirled Loftus, picked him up and slammed him down. Referee Charles Bresnahan said the whistle hadn't blown, that Loftus was within bounds and that he could see nothing wrong with the play. But the fans hooted and booed, just the same. And the tumult spoiled poor Whizzer's farewell appearance as a collegiate footballer.

You've got to hand it to the sensation from Wellington—a town of 553 persons in north central Colorado—that he took the "bird" on the chin and apologized. He didn't say, "I have to tackle that way to favor my left knee which was badly injured two years ago." He could have said it, because that's true—thats' why he uses the pick-up and slam-down style.

Anyway, those Denver people proved themselves real folks, after all. Because they gave Whizzer one of the greatest ovations in the history of Rocky Mountain football when he left the field at the end of the game.

And in spite of the booing, I guess young White felt pretty good that night because the Detroit Lions of the National Professional Football League wired Gov. Teller Ammons, of Colorado, offering Whizzer a job next season and expressing indebtedness to the State for producing Dutch Clark "the greatest player of all time" who now coaches the Lions.

There were other offers too. But the Whizzer was dreaming of a Rhodes Scholarship to continue his studies of law at Oxford, Eng., so that ultimately he might become an all-America attorney—like he became an all-America football player in '37.

Lambert Memorial Trophy to Pitt

New York, Nov. 30 (AP).—Pittsburgh's football team, unbeaten and tied only by Fordham, today was awarded for the second straight year the August V. Lambert Memorial Trophy as the outstanding Eastern eleven.

Thirty-one sports writers from New York, Baltimore, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Washington gave the Panthers the trophy by a margin of four votes over Fordham. Pitt was the choice of 17 writers while 13 named Fordham, and one, Darthmouth.

Villanova, Harvard, Holy Cross and Yale trailed in order named.

Remaining Spots Given To 5 Teams

Cornell, Villanova, Columbia, Yale and Dartmouth Place Stars.

By Alan Gould.

New York, Nov. 30.—Pittsburgh was held to a scoreless tie this season by Fordham in the only game either powerhouse failed to win but the Panthers outnumber the Rams, five players to three, on the Eastern All-Star football squad, compiled today by the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, for the second straight year, gained three places on the first team and two on the second eleven. From the unbeaten Panther array, Marshall (Biggie) Goldberg at halfback, Tony Matisi at tackle, and Al Lezouski at guard, were picked by the expert jury for top honors, with Frank Souchak at end and Hal (Curly) Stebbins at halfback on the alternate team.

Bill Daddio, rated Pitt's best end and an All-Eastern choice last year, failed to repeat because injuries kept him out of most major games.

Although the "Ivy" touch to the All-Star selections was not quite as pronounced as last year, Yale's great Clint Frank emerged as the only repeater and six of the seven "Ivy League" colleges gained representation on the two line-ups named. Dartmouth, leader of the "old guard" group, placed three stars and Cornell two on the combined squad.

Competition proved the keenest among the ends, tackles and backs. Frank and Goldberg were unanimous selections. Columbia's more versatile Sid Luckman, the East's premier passer, was picked over Bob Macleod, best of Dartmouth's fine array of running backs. For the fullback post, Bullet Bill Osmanski of Holy Cross, a great line plunger, got the call over Harvard's crack spinner, Vernon Struck.

The experts generally rated Jerome (Brud) Holland, giant Cornell Negro, as the best all-around end, taking into account his durability, blocking, tackling, pass-catching, and ball-carrying. Villanova's John Wysocki, a spectacular performer, shaded Souchak in the All-Star poll despite the Pitt veteran's steadiness and place-kicking talent.

Whiffy Cox, Wife Swing Down Golden Trail Today With Pot of Gold as Their Objective

Kenwood Pro Has Good Record for Winter Golf Tours.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Shortly after dawn this morning Mr. and Mrs. Wiffy Cox will tie trunks to the car, make sure that precious set of golf sticks is tucked away in a safe place, and head for a four-month tour of golfdom's grapefruit circuit, from Miami to Agua Caliente and points west.

Ever since the fall of 1929, when the Kenwood professional, then holding down the Dyker Beach, N. Y., job, made his first Southern jaunt, he's set out on this financial gamble with a score of the Nation's big time professionals, seeking the gold and glamour associated with the tour.

A partial list of his more important triumphs from December until April include top money in the following opens: Agua Caliente, Sacramento, Texas, North-South, Florida, San Francisco Match Play, International Four-Ball, with Willie MacFarlane, and the Pinehurst two-ball, twice also with the canny Scot.

His only runner-up berth was at Pasadena but Wiffy has been third on numerous occasions, including Pasadena, LaGorce, Phoenix, Pensacola, Charleston, Bel Air, Berkeley, Orlando, Texas, and semi-finalist in the four-ball and San Francisco match play.

Pro's Meal Ticket.

The average golfer pictures the trip as an extended vacation but it'sserious business to these pros; it's their meal-ticket, a key to fame, and an opportunity to tie up with a rich club or sports concern, if they are consistent winners.

After his best season in the Metropolitan District in 1928, where he finished second in the Metropolitan Open, in the same spot at Long Island and the State Opens, and ninth in the National, Wiffy decided he'd try the winter tour, another in the army of good local mentors seeking the short cut to a National rating.

Despite the fact that he didn't win an open outright, he picked up $3,500 and spent $3,800, but considered the $300 difference a paying investment, as he became well known in the golfing world.

Wiffy was a regular member of the winter tour from '29. The next year his winnings jumped to $6,200, as he took the Florida Open, his first important victory. His expenses were only $2,000 less but it was marked down a satisfactory trip.

The '31 trip showed a $1,000 profit but the following year he fractured his wrist at Coral Gables, was stricken with the flu in California, and won only $1,600 compared with a conservative expense estimate of $2,500.

He went over the $2,000 mark in 1934 and '35, but last year sickness to Wiffy and members of his family cut his tour to a brief Florida excursion, netting around $600.

The expenses of the big name professionals, the golfers who live in the best hotels and are the "front" for the barn-storming little fellow, force them to win at least $3,600 on the tour to break even. Entry fees, caddies, clubs and balls, meals, amusement, laundry, travel, and incidentals soon eat up the prize money.

The front clan compose only about 20 per cent of the group. The remainder live in trailers, in tourist camps and boarding houses, and do without the luxuries that the bigger professionals require. It is possible to get by on a little over $1,000. living in pairs, etc.

Wiffy's had his share of the ups and downs on the cross-country trek. At Agua Caliente, when the first prize was $10,000, he was leading the field at the sixty-first hole by 3 shots, gambled on a brassie shot that missed, took an 8 and wound up with $900. The same thing happened at Pinehurst when he was leading at the sixty-first, took an 8 and finished well down the list. He returned to win both events, however.

Wiffy hadn't spent a Christmas at home since 1928, until last year, when he was taken sick on Christmas Day. The Kenwood stroker has watched seven consecutive Rose Bowl games and intends to make it eight out of nine this year.

At Agua Caliente Wiffy and Clarence Clark liked the odds quoted, each at 250 to 2, so they each bought one ticket. Wiffy, first off the course, posted a 71 that stood up until Clark, last man to finish, tied it. They split the money. Since then Wiffy's odds have dropped until two years ago in the Open he was 8 to 1, one of the lowest ever quoted.

Unlike baseball or football, the links clan has no strenuous training schedule. Daily practice and plenty of sleep are the main requisites. The driving pros are forced to make Hollywood from Miami in four and a half days, some of them driving alone, and play in the Hollywood Open the following day.

The wives accompany the stars, but few are seen on the courses. Only a few play golf, and just one or two follow their husbands while playing. Bridge is their favorite sport.

So the golfing member of the Cox family is off again. One of the richest seasons since the boom days greets the paid clan, winding up with the North-South Open at Pinehurst in March. The District's leading professional, and its champion, is off on the Golden Trail that pays off on subpar golf.

Negligence Charged To Two Trainers

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Nov. 30.—Two additional sponging cases, a recommendation of the Bowie stewards to the Maryland racing commission that stable negligence be drastically punished, a series of upsets and a crowd of 18,000 marked the closing of racing in Maryland for 1937.

The spongings disclosed today, which brought the total to four, were yesterday's work, for the two horses involved ran in Monday's sixth race. Trainer . M. Feltner removed a sponge from the nose of Mrs. K. N. Gilpin's Buck Langhorne this morning, while Dr. Henry J. McCarthy, track veterinarian, relieved the Paragon Stable's Indomitable of another nasal obstruction last night. Both horses had been examined in the paddock and had been reported O. K.

Handlers of Indomitable demanded another examination after the horse's poor race and the sponge was revealed. The sponging of Buck Langhorne and Indomitable brought to three the number of horses tampered with in yesterday's sixth race. Master Lad's sponge was discovered early and he was scratched. Buck Langhorne made a bold move nearing the stretch and finished third, with Indomitable in seventh place.

Mystery was added to the sponging today when it was brought out that Indomitable is stabled at Laurel and was vanned here for the race.

The stewards spent a busy day. A long stream of horsemen faced the officials. Late today they issued the following report:

"The stewards of Bowie, after investigating the sponging cases of White Sand, Master Lad, Indomitable and Buck Langhorne, find that Trainers C. P. Miles, jr., C. Feltner, and J. Simon Healy have been guilty of negligence particularly pertaining to the proper inspection necessary to preclude the possibility of their charges entering the paddock in a tampered condition, that the respective grooms of the horses involved, J. Digby and Trowill, are guilty of negligence in the care of their charges, that Watchman J. Conway of the Paragon Stable is guilty of negligence in the night supervision of his stable. Therefore, the stewards of Bowie respectfully recommend to the Maryland State Racing Commission that an adequate rule be incorporated in the Maryland rules of racing which will provide for the drastic punishment of any parties proven guilty of negligence."

No Betting Coup.

As far as could be learned, there was no big betting coup made on the sixth race yesterday. Mutuel Manager Mort Mahoney reported that the betting was normal and that if the spongers were planning a killing they were frightened by the early discovery of Master Lad's condition. Mahoney did say that $1,500 in comeback money came in on the race. However, this was a

North Carolina and Duke Dominate All-Southern

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 30.—Players from North Carolina and Duke dominate the twelfth annual all-Southern Conference football team selected for the Associated Press by 60 coaches and sports writers of Maryland, Virginia and the Carolinas.

The honorary squad includes four representatives each of North Carolina and Duke and one each from Clemson, Maryland and Virginia Military Institute.

Andy Bershak, North Carolina's brilliant end, was an almost unanimous choice and heads the team as captain. In the backfield, Elmore (Honey) Hackney of Duke, and Paul Shu, V. M. I. sophomore, were backed by an avalanche of votes. The closest scrap gave Charlie Woods of Clemson the center berth over Dan Hill, jr., of Duke and Andy Sabados of the Citadel. Jim Meade of Maryland was a popular choice.

The teams:

FIRST TEAM	POS.
Andy Bershak, North Carolina	End
Herb Hudgins, Duke	End
Henry Bartos, N. Carolina	Tackle
Joe Brunansky, Duke	Tackle
Elmer Wrenn, N. Carolina	Guard
Woody Lipscomb, Duke	Guard
Charlie Woods, Clemson	Center
Crowell Little, N. Carolina	Back
Paul Shu, V. M. I.	Back
Jim Meade, Maryland	Back
Elmore Hackney, Duke	Back

SECOND TEAM	POS.

Redskins Leave Today For Game With Giants

Seclusion at Westminster Country Club Will Greet Locals on Arrival in Manhattan—Deadlock Sunday Will Mean Loss of Title.

Three days in seclusion at the Westchester Country Club, 20 miles from Manhattan, is the program of the Washington Redskins as they entrain today for New York and Sunday's title battle with the Giants.

Coach Ray Flaherty will set up a training camp on the country club grounds tonight and has scheduled private practice sessions for Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Two practice sessions each day will be the routine of the Redskins, with a "skull" drill at night.

Yesterday in their Griffith Stadium workout the Redskins polished their running and passing game, with the emphasis on the latter. For a full hour, Slingin' Sammy Baugh hurled passes.

Amazing interest by Washington fans in Sunday's game was noted again yesterday, when a block of 1,146 tickets which arrived at the Redskins' office at 11 a. m. was sold out two hours later. Last night the Redskin officials were attempting to procure more tickets for Washington fans, who are expected to number 5,000 at the Polo Grounds.

Flaherty, who scouted the Giants the Giants personally last Thanksgiving Day, when the New York club was played to a 3-to-3 tie by the Brooklyns, is concentrating his defense against the passing of Ed Danowski, and the running of Tuffy Leemans and Hank Soar.

Soar, the Providence College youth who nearly became the property of the Redskins last year, is feared as much as Leemans. He was the Giants' best ground gainer in the game here which the Redskins won, 13-3.

With a tie score tantamount to a defeat for the Redskins inasmuch as a deadlock in Sunday's game would give the Giants the title, Washington hopes will be depending in a great measure on the field-goal kicking of Riley Smith.

Smith, who ranks as one of the three leading placement kickers in the league, may fight it out in a place-kicking duel with the Giants' capable Tillie Manton.

New York betters have installed the Giants a slight favorite to win despite their early season defeat by the Redskins here. Coach Steve Owens of the Giants has reiterated that the Redskins were outplayed in that game and that only the injury to Tuffy Leemans swayed victory to the Washington club.

The game will also present a battle between the Giants' Leemans and the Redskins' Cliff Battles for an all-league backfield berth with the Giants confident that the former G. W. star will outstrip the Redskin ace. There is a well-defined suspicion on the part of the New York players also that Ed Danowski is a better passer than Sammy Baugh, as the averages indicated. Baugh has completed the most heaves, but Danowski has the better percentage.

Matt Twomey Is Suspended For Golden Glove Actions

Matt Twomey, manager of Lou Gevinson, the District featherweight title hope, drew his second suspension in six months yesterday when the Boxing Commission lifted his permit as a fight second for four months.

Twomey was brought before the board on two counts. He was charged with entering the names of Perrow, Weisberg and Cuddy in the recent Golden Gloves tournament as members of the National Guard when they were not members of the Guard. He was also charged with loud coaching from the corners of three contestants in the Golden Gloves affair.

The suspension will keep Twomey from working in the corners of his boys, including Gevinson. Twomey was suspended for a similar violation on March 31, 1937. The suspension was lifted on June 2 after he paid a $50 fine.

Howard Livingston was granted a license as promoter-matchmaker at yesterday's meeting. Livingston will open the Rialto and hold fight shows there every Friday night. The first event is scheduled for December 10.

The commission wound up its meeting by tabling the application of Baby Manuel for recognition as District featherweight champion and by giving a license as examining and ringside physician to Dr. Gilbert Ottenberg.

'Jesse James' Of Rassledom To Show Here

By Bob Garrison.

Unless there's another Bob Ford lurking in the wrestling wilderness, a twentieth century Jesse James may plunder his way to fame—at least Joe Turner and his fellow promoters would like to see history repeat in that respect.

For out of the West, the same West that gave to the Post-Civil War era that mounted desperado of the plains, has come another Jesse James, sans horse. Within the short space of a few months, a 6-foot 2-inch, 190-pound figure of perfected physique has scaled the heights of grapple world and now stands ready to take over the championship duties, should fate condescend.

So it was for this reason that Turner hastened to import the latest mat sensation for his weekly show, at his W Street Arena, Thursday night. He has hired his services for a special 30-minute bout against one Henry Kulkowich, Russian revolter. The match will augment his double feature bouts, which pit Ed Don George, Michigan, against Jack Singer, California, and Steve "Crusher" Casey, Ireland, against Len Macaluso, Colgate athlete. Both are one fall to a finish bouts.

Life Story Is Novel.

The life story of James reads, along a different vein, as interesting as did that of the first to fame of that name. Born 22 years ago in Greece (ah, ha), he came to this country at a tender age and settled in Houston, Tex. As soon as he could maneuver on his underpinnings, it was evident that he was to be talented in gymnastics, so supple and loose were his muscles. So that's where he first got his wrestle ideas.

His first real assignment came at the age of 15 when he was tempted by the defi of a carnival wrestler who offered to meet all comers. His father offered to give consent to a professional career if the boy could pin the circus demon. Here, Jesse, (nee Demitros) Stephanos Tzigikos, showed mental restraint. Instead of jumping into the ring and sure defeat, he returned to his job in a Pan American Oil Co. road crew, trained hard, and one year later when the carnival returned, so did Jesse.

It was the same old story. Jesse stepped into the fight tent with little save a love for the game and a desire to cop the $25 purse offered to the man who pinned the carnival champion. And when he stepped out he had the prize and the other fellow's job. Since then he's been a professional wrestler.

Should Be Crowd Pleaser.

You'd never know it to look at his handsome features, though, so unmarked is he. When he reported in New York several months ago he immediately was taken under the wing of Jack Pfeffer, famous trainer, and immediately began knocking off big name grapplers, at every turn. So tomorrow night local fans get their first look at the man that Jim Londos, former champion, has labeled championship material.

He is said to possess some super ability that enables him to hold his own against men whom he has to spot 40 and 50 pounds in weight advantage. Grips that torment other grunt and groan artists until they are helpless, never worry him, 'tis said. He slips out like the gas in your auto tank, and is a virtual acrobat in the ring. He is fast, elusive and knows all the grips.

There'll be other bouts tomorrow night but most of the attention will be focused on this wrestling wizard, who seems destined for the heights.

In 30-minute time limit matches, Vanka Zeleznaik, of Poland, clashes with Billy Hanson, Nebraska nailer, and Pawdy Mack, from Ireland, passes a half-hour with Jack Zarnos, of Greece.

Schwartz Plays Stern In Handball Games

An exhibition of championship handball will be offered tonight at the Y. M. C. A. handball courts when Jack Schwartz, local singles champion, and the team of Joe Cowley and Wallace Winkler, local doubles rulers, meet an invading trio from Baltimore at 8 p. m.

Schwartz plays Lefty Stern, Y. M. H. A. Baltimore, in the first match, and then Cowley and Winkler play the team of Al Blum and Nat Rosenfeld, Y. M. H. A., Baltimore, in the other game. Blum and Rosenfeld are national Y. M. H. A. champions.

normal amount, he said, and did not indicate that particularly large wagers had been made throughout the country.

The closing day program proved a most profitable one for the track despite the publicity given yesterday's sponging. The betting for the day was the best of the year here with the exception of some Saturdays and holidays. A total of $468,561 passed through the mutuel machines.

While the favorite players had their innings during the afternoon, it was a longshot that did the chief running in the Bryan and O'Hara Memorial Handicap, the $7,500 added feature event.

Busy K., owned by Mrs. P. D. Lee Watts and carrying the light weight of 105 pounds, galloped away with the mile and three-sixteenth race. Ridden by Jockey Nick Wall, Busy K. forged to the front in the opening furlong and withstood all attempts to dislodge him. The son of Busy American finished in front of Regal Lily, half of the Jeffords entry, and Burning Star, owned by the Shandon Farm.

New Mat Sensation

JESSE JAMES,

At The Post . . . .

Selections at Charles Town.

Dear Al:

Well, we finally pulled out of the sponge country and we're all set for another "Battle of Charles Town." The West Virginia meeting promises to be more than a sham battle, too. Al Boyle, Brother Kaufmann and the other fellows have jammed their stalls with better-than-average horses and there will be many a close finish before the curtain falls on racing in the East. Thankful are we that there will not be any camera. The outside horses will have to be there to get it at this track. Charles Town has been fairly swamped with offers to try cameras and so far has shunned them. According to my agents, Charles Town expects its biggest fall meeting. The mutuel machines have been oiled and track officials want the Washingtonians and Baltimoreans to chug-chug to the oval on the usual special. It is reported that President Boyle took a photo of the track, shining in the sunlight, yesterday, and sent it to the Weather Bureau demanding that the New Deal dish out only those kind of days. Clocker Mike, who has been on the grounds for several days, says the track is drying out and, barring rain before post time, should be "good" for the first race. Here's some Charles Town facts: Post time, first race—1:30 p. m.; daily double—second and third races; race special—leaves Union Station, 11:30; Silver Spring, 11:45 and Rockville, 11:56. Please check your sponges at Harpers Ferry. BILL.

First race—Windsor's Hope appears to be well placed in the day's opener. Clocker Mike reports this one will like the course and I'm going to string along. Rise and Shine is a fair sort. Perfect Liar might be a factor if off the reserve list.

Second race—Proteus should go well on the local oval. The track may be off enough to suit this one's ailing legs. Sun Sweep had early speed on the big tracks and is dangerous. Queen Vic to take care of the others.

Third race—Rough Buddy showed speed at Bowie and may win at the first asking with the change of tracks. Can Bloom, first on the also eligible list, went well here last summer and is dangerous. Jimmy C. has Wheeling form to recommend him.

Fourth race—Nay Nay knows this course like a book and is reported ready to crack down in this short sprint. Edith Walker has all her speed and is due to be a keen contender. Tempting Witch ran well in New England. Stool Pigeon is a doubtful starter, but will be prominent if in action.

Fifth race—High Explosion is a newcomer to Charles Town and may take down a purse first out. The distance is right. Hard Chase had speed, but could not win on the big time and should be close with these. Lucky Turn for the show end.

Sixth race—Sunned drops down and picks up much weight. However, this one has class and should take down the chief money. French Trap never has run back to the Delaware form, but likes this course. Icy Wind for the show money.

Seventh race—Best Policy is fairly consistent and seems suited by conditions here. I'm going to string alone. Taunton was conditioning on the big tracks and should be Luculent for the minor award.

First race—Jobakheta appears to be the best bet of the day. Needs only the right handling. Sighting Bar and Stepee to take care of the remainder of the field.

Best bet—Jobakheta.

Baltz Advises Reasonable Aid By Loan League

Addresses Representatives of 6-Billion-Dollar Organization.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Advising a policy of wise co-operation with the new housing program, Edward C. Baltz, Washingtonian, president of the United States Building and Loan League, declared yesterday the aid of this group should be given without any departure from a sound and reasonably conservative viewpoint.

Referring to President Roosevelt's message on housing, Mr. Baltz, speaking at a luncheon given in his honor by the District Building and Loan League, described it as encouraging, but reminded the proposed legislation, in the main, looks to aid from commercial banks in this activity, rather than to methods which have been successful with the great thrift institutions in this country for 100 years.

Addressing more than 100 Federal and District officials, national and local building and loan representatives at the Raleigh Hotel, the recently elected head of a $6,000,000,000 organization emphasized that housing activity will follow a general resumption of business, and expressed hope that encouragement of and co-operation with the latter would be the prime objective of Congress and the Administration.

Decrying the punitive and "man-against-man" ideas that have proved so harmful to our democracy, Representative Everett M. Dirksen, of Illinois, pleaded for that mutuality of spirit and purpose, so successfully exemplified in the building and loan idea, as a means of advancing the welfare of the country.

Senator King, of Utah, said there was no greater service to democracy than home ownership and praise for the local and national organizations was also voiced by President Melvin C. Hazen, of the District Board of Commissioners. Morton Bodfish, Chicago, executive vice president of the United States Building and Loan League, paid high tribute to the work of Mr. Baltz, who is secretary of Perpetual Building Association, largest unit of the league.

Arthur G. Bishop, president of the local league, presided, and the guest list included the following: Morton Bodfish, executive vice president, United States Building and Loan League; H. F. Cellarius, secretary-treasurer, United States Building and Loan League; Edward F. Colladay, president, Washington Board of Trade; Robert J. Cottrell, secretary, Washington Board of Trade; Preston Delano, governor, Federal Home Loan Bank System; Representative Everett M. Dirksen, of Illinois; William S. Underwriter Speaker.

James Elton Bragg, chartered life underwriter, lecturer on life insurance at New York University and manager of the Guardian Life Insurance Co.'s New York City agency, will be the guest speaker at the luncheon of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association at the Willard Hotel Friday. After 18 years of field and home office work Mr. Bragg is well qualified to discuss what he calls "Our Product."

He has been a salesman, agency manager, teacher of life insurance, vice president of a life insurance company, member of the advisory council of a large bank and a trustee of the National Association of Life Underwriters. Because of the many angles of his experience, members of the local association are assured of an interesting address, timed to the present situation as regards life insurance and its place in the country's economic development. A large attendance is expected at the meeting, as Mr. Bragg is well known in Washington, having appeared on programs of the annual Baltimore-Washington Sales Congresses.

A. I. B. Tournament.

The athletic committee of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, is completing arrangements for the annual table tennis tournament for chapter members. Under the chairmanship of Raymond L. Jones, of the National Metropolitan Bank, the committee has made plans to hold the tourney in the recreation room of the American Security & Trust Co., December 7-10, inclusive. There will be singles and doubles events, and a consolation round. Finals will be played December 10.

The committee assisting Mr. Jones is composed of the following: James Grant, Washington Loan & Trust Co.; William M. Grimes and Malvern F. Morse, American Security & Trust Co.; Sam Tolbert, Riggs National Bank; Frank Wilson and William G. Yeatman, Washington Loan & Trust Co.

Business Failures Down.

New York, Nov. 30 (AP).—Business failures in the United States for the week ended November 24, which included the Thanksgiving holiday, were 184, compared with 206 the previous week and 129 in the comparable five-day period last year, Dun & Bradstreet stated today.

Cotton Lower; March at 7.95

New York, Nov. 30 (AP).—Rallies from opening declines were later lost in cotton today under Southern selling and liquidation. March recovered from 7.96 to 8.06 and then eased to close at 7.95, with final prices 5 to 8 points net lower.

The market opened 3 to 6 points lower in response to easier cables but prices soon turned steadier on foreign buying and at one time the list showed net gains of 3 to 4 points.

Futures Price Range.	High.	Low.	Last.

Cottonseed Oil.

After advancing 4 to 8 points on buying promoted by reports the Government was lifting 5% for crude oil in the Southeast, cottonseed oil reacted under Southern hedge selling today. Final prices were 1 higher to 3 lower. Sales, 114 contracts. Bleachable spot, nominal; December closed, 7.06; January, 7.02; March, 7.05; May, 7.07; July, 7.10.

Daily Oil Output Drops 148,890 Barrels

Tulsa, Okla., Nov. 30 (AP).—Average production of crude oil in the United States dropped 148,890 barrels daily during the week ending Nov. 27 to a total of 3,426,180 barrels daily, the Oil and Gas Journal reported today.

Oklahoma had a decline of 22,200 barrels daily to 567,825; East Texas was down 70,519 barrels daily to 416,050, and the State of Texas had a drop of 110,452 barrels daily to 1,321,943. Louisiana's production declined 1,377 barrels daily to 242,685, and California 10,750 to 702,000. Kansas increased 350 barrels daily to 179,300.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Advance in Moderate Trade; Steel and Building Shares in Demand; Wheat Drops.

New York, Nov. 30.—Stocks rallied in the early trading, managing to recover most of the losses taken yesterday, and profit taking was too light to wipe out the larger portion of the gains before the close. Trading was only moderate, with 1,150,000 shares turned over. United States bonds were unsteady. December wheat closed 1¼ cents lower at 89¾ cents a bushel.

Wall Street stock traders found hope on two sides, but they had nothing tangible on which to proceed. They had to rely heavily on the word of Senators that something would be done to reduce undistributed profits taxes, upon the suggestions of the President for improvement in the building construction industry, and upon logic for favorable action by the I. C. C. on the petition of the railroads for higher freight rates.

Rails Firm.

Railroad shares and building industry shares were firm, indicating the eagerness of the market to seize upon any suggestion of good news. Rails were not able to go ahead much nevertheless, because perhaps too good a case of poverty was made out. At their best the steels, coppers, building supply and allied stocks rose 1 to 3 points, the best gains being sown by Steel, Manville, Gypsum, Lone Star Cement, Flintkote, General Electric, Westinghouse, Anaconda, Kennecott and American Radiator. Public utilities also managed to move ahead a bit.

In the miscellaneous divisions gains ranged as high as 8 points, duPont climbing that far. General Motors and Chrysler advanced more than a point each. American Woolen preferred broke half a dozen points on dividend suspension to the lowest price in several years and the common weakened. Gulf, Mobile & Northern preferred responded to a dividend, the first since 1931, with a rise of 6 points. A number of cash transactions on stocks selling ex dividend took place, the operation entitling the purchaser to the dividend. Dealing in both classes of Schulte Retail Stores stocks was back at normal and slight gains were made.

Excess Reserves.

Excess reserves of more than $1,100,000,000 in the country, of which more than $400,000,000 is in New York, gave assurance that there will not be a flicker in the money market either in the immediate future or at the year end. If there were the remotest danger of a flurry in money, the Federal open market committee now meeting in Washington, would take care to pull another monetary rabbit out of its bag of tricks, none of which seems to have much effect upon business. It is interesting to note that in London short-term money is having its normal year-end firming tendencies, the rate for three months' bills within the past week having advanced from 9-16 to 13-16 of 1 per cent. If currency movement at Christmas should be larger than expected (it is now more than $100,000,000 below a year ago) the most that could happen would be an insignificant increase in the yield rate on new issues of Treasury bills.

Dried Fruits Steady.

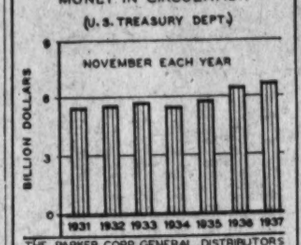
Per Capita Cash At November Peak



THE PARKER CORR GENERAL DISTRIBUTORS INCORPORATED INVESTORS

Boston, Mass., Nov. 30.—More cash was in circulation on November 1 than ever before at this time of year. If all this money in circulation were divided equally, every person in this country would have $50.38. This is $1.88 more than he would have had a year ago. For comparison, if the Federal debt were divided in the same way every person in the country would owe $285, or $25 more than a year ago.

Wheat Prices Decline With Winnipeg Drop

Reports of Snow in the Southwest Also Acts as Brake to Rise.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 30.—Despite moderate transient upturns responsive to advances in securities, the Chicago wheat market ruled substantially lower for the most part today at the last.

Relative weakness of wheat quotations at Winnipeg, where the November future under heavy pressure of liquidation sales expired today, acted as a weight on values here as the day drew to an end. Late reports of snowfalls in domestc winter wheat areas Southwest served also as a handicap to friends of higher prices.

C.&P. Reports For October

Operating revenues of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. for October amounted to $950,265, according to the report of Charles A. Robinson, general manager, filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission. While this figure represents an increase of $50,821 over operating revenues for the same month a year ago, it was pointed out that operating expenses for October, this year, were $691,419, or $46,883 more than in October, last year, due largely to increased wages.

The cost of telephone plant in service at the end of October was $41,432,925. Telephones in service were increased over the previous month by 2,383, there being 224,402 telephones in service in Washington on October 31. Telephone users made 25,738,000 calls during the month, or an increase of 1,174,000 calls over October a year ago.

Clee Asks Court To Void Election

Jersey City, N. J., Nov. 30 (AP).—Lester H. Clee, Republican State senator who was defeated for the New Jersey governorship a month ago, asked the State Supreme Court today to set aside the election of A. Harry Moore, Democrat.

His petition charged "malconduct, fraud and corruption on the part of district election boards" in Hudson County "were so flagrant, widespread, and of sufficient scope to challenge the result" of the election of the present senior United States Senator.

Bob Burns Says—

A weakling will always give up and quit when he gets a hard blow, but when you give a blow on the chin to a man with spunk, you can expect a blow in return.

That's why I've always admired my poet uncle—my Uncle Squinchy. He went up to St. Louis to sell some of his poetry and when the editor read it, he turned to my Uncle Squinchy and he said "We don't print such stuff as this!"

Uncle Squinchy says "Oh, is that so! Well, mister, I'll tell you somethin' that'll take you down a peg or two! You ain't the only one that won't print it!"
